

EIGHT ARRESTED IN TIPTON LIQUOR RAIDS

Norman Baker

ALL TO FARMERS—write me a letter stating if you will be willing to attend a meeting within the next three weeks for the purpose of organizing the SINGLE FARM UNITE PLAN. We are now ready to start—no need to wait to attend as delegates from your respective counties to help draft the rules and laws—can we depend upon you? Write me today—address Norman Baker, Box 297, Muscatine, Iowa—don't wait—DO IT NOW—You've waited for 100 years already, so don't add another to that long wait.

AFTER ALL—real permanent remedy for farmers' T. B. trouble and all their other troubles, is intelligent use of ballot box—farmers cast about 63 per cent of vote in Iowa—not only this but majority of present Iowa legislature—said to be composed of farmers—now doesn't it seem strange present legislature is on other side of fence and stands behind the T. B. test law?—what's the reason—simply better political machine men than farmers—they obey political machine—only way out is for farmers to have political machine of their own—when you say political machine to some people they think you mean something mean—no, it means straight honest farmer organization capable of getting right men elected to office and making them serve farmers and best interests of all people and keeping straight while in office—only answer to big combines that control politics now and their machines is combine of common people to control government in interest of everybody—single farmer organization I advocate could do such job very well.

MARENGO EDITOR—may find that all farmers will not stand for his stand against them—some editors are being awakened every day to the fact that the farmers have grown tired of reading their "machine farm notes" and demand something new—if it is not for the Department of Agriculture sending out notices to some papers would die—the farmers know they have had 11 years of depression—have read the bunk published by such papers as Marengo for 11 years or more—still they are in the hole—now they have decided to select their own speakers—listen to constructive things instead of the destructive things handed to them in the past—if the farmers in Keosauqua, Ladora and Marengo would cancel their subscriptions to such papers, it would save the editor a good lesson and TEACH HIM THAT THE FARMERS KNOW WHAT THEY WANT AND WHEN THEY WANT IT.—this same editor would yell his head off because the farmers want a meeting to hear the speaker of their choice—at the same time he would let a bank close in his city no doubt and take with it thousands of dollars of the farmers money and NEVER SAY A WORD—how about it Mr. Editor—have you moral courage—are you a progressive energetic newspaper—OR A COPYIST? Do your duty farmers.

TO OUR ADVERTISERS—don't overlook one good bet—in your advertising copy in this paper—put in the words—MAIL ORDERS FILLED—display it big—these thousands of loyal readers and subscribers of this paper out of town will order from you because they know we only accept advertising that we believe in our best judgment is good—TRY IT.

TO OUR READERS—especially our subscribers and stock holders—lend us a hand—patronize those that advertise in our columns—they are loyal to us—those that do not advertise, meaning those who advertise elsewhere—ARE NOT OUR FRIENDS—they care nothing

Baker Addresses Two Large Crowds Sunday

Promises to Deliver Second Talk When Crowd Gathers

Perhaps nothing proves the unrest that exists today among farmers as much as the experiences of Norman Baker, Sunday, who on that day gave an address at the ball park near Kosciusko, Ia., starting at 3 p. m. A few minutes before the speaking was to start there was a turmoil at the gate which followed an argument between the gate keepers and the crowd which had come to hear the Muscatine man speak.

The baseball committee had advertised three ball games, two to be played before Mr. Baker's address and the third to follow the speaking. A gate admission of 50 cents for men and 25 cents for ladies had been advertised and this information was printed on hand bills and posters which were distributed in the immediate vicinity.

Crowds Refuse Payment

After the first two ball games had been played, and just before Mr. Baker began to talk, a crowd of many hundreds of persons gathered at the main entrance to the park. Many of them were folks who had read the announcement of Mr. Baker's speaking dates in the columns of the Free Press and had driven many miles to hear him talk. One automobile load reported having driven 135 miles from 35 to 10 miles. All refused to pay the gate admission, because, they said, they had arrived after the first ball game and part of the second had been played.

The committee, unable to satisfy

Three Nations Join Britain In Quitting Gold Standard

Norway, Sweden and Egypt Follow British Lead

By OTTO D. TOLISCHUS
LONDON.—(INS).—Following the lead of Great Britain, Norway, Sweden and Egypt were off the gold standard today as new problems arising from changing monetary values caused serious concern to the governments of Denmark, Finland, Greece and the Irish Free State.

The collapse of the gold standard in the Scandinavian countries was partially attributed to the depreciation of the British pound due to the close trade and financial relations between Norway, Sweden and England, and also to the recent failure of Sweden to obtain new sustaining credits in the United States and France.

The governments of both Norway and Sweden prohibited the exporting of gold, and in Sweden the National bank raised its discount rate from 6 to 8 per cent.

Action Upsets World Market

The action of Norway and Sweden in suspending the gold standard had immediate repercussions in Danish and Finnish financial circles, with both the governments of Denmark and Finland taking steps today to deal with anticipated depreciation in their national currencies.

While these events were taking place in northern Europe, dispatches from Cairo announced that the Egyptian government had decided the purchase and sale of gold, thus dropping the gold standard in Egypt. Increases in a number of import duties were also proposed because of the decline in the value of the English pound compared with gold-supported currencies.

Greece Having Trouble

Greece was also having acute money troubles, the government issuing a decree drastically regulating the purchase and sale of gold, and placing all foreign currency

Catholic Charities Group Asks Hoover To Aid Jobless

BY JOHN J. McSWENEY
WILKES-BARRE, Pa.—(INS).—Already on record as advocating rapid mobilization of emergency relief funds by federal, state and public agencies to relieve distress, the National Conference of Catholic Charities today resumed business sessions.

The directors of the conference Sunday the directors suggested that President Hoover and congress collaborate in the creation of a federal relief fund.

The directors, headed by the Rev. William J. Kane, of Albany, N. Y., issued a statement which read in part:

"The work is there to be done and the federal government has the necessary resources within its reach. Funds could be secured by a large bond issue. We look to our state and national governments for prompt and constructive action."

"It is apparent to every reasonable person that private industry will not provide any large increase in employment opportunities in the near future. A program of public work is our only hope."

Dr. John D. O'Brien, of Canton, O., told the conference that mental hygiene is fast winning recognition as a public health problem of major importance. He said:

"In our machine age and complex civilization, we are creating human problems faster than we can solve them. At this moment of chaos, unrest, broken morals, difficult adjustments and conflicts, the seeds of future mental disease are being sown."

One out of every ten persons, Dr. O'Brien said, is expected at some

CHICAGO, Ill.—(INS).—Ninety-six municipalities served by the Public Service company of northern Illinois will appear before the Illinois commerce commission tomorrow to ask for lower gas rates.

They will request the commission to pass along the economies to be accomplished by mixing natural gas piped from Texas with manufactured gas.

Rates filed by the Public Service company under the new schedule give a slight reduction over former prices. The company is petitioning the commission for permission to mix natural gas with the manufactured product. This change will affect all northern Illinois towns on the public service circuit except Pontiac, Ill.

The dry strategy is to "bore from within" in each of these numerical and politically powerful national associations, with the ultimate objective of so mobilizing the dry members that the declarations of opposition to existing dry laws may be repudiated at some future date.

Plan Special Drives

Special drives to fortify and increase the dry elements in each of these great organizations are planned, it was announced by Dr. Ernest C. Cherrington, chairman of the dry group. He contended that the anti-prohibition resolutions in each case had been "put over" by a small but militant minority, who caught the dries unaware and unorganized for resistance.

The majority of the membership in each case had been "put over" by a small but militant minority, who caught the dries unaware and unorganized for resistance.

Big Dirigible Slated For an All-Day Trip Through Sky

AKRON, O.—(INS).—Slated for an all-day cruise in her first "serious test flight," the U. S. S. Akron, mightiest of all lighter-than-air craft, took off from here today at 10:45 o'clock, starting her fourth air voyage.

Navy officials planned to give the craft a thorough test on today's flight during which all mechanisms will be closely watched.

The craft probably will remain in the northern Ohio section.

SOLUTION OF MURDER LIKELY

Authorities Dragging Long Island Sound For Evidence

NEW YORK.—(INS).—Solution of the weird "pirate" murder of Benjamin P. Collins aboard his yacht, the Penguin, appeared more likely today as authorities dragged Long Island sound for additional evidence.

District Attorney Blue of Suffolk county was preparing to ask Mrs. Lillian Collins whether two pairs of trousers, filled with sand and seaweed, were those worn by her husband's slayers. Mrs. Collins had asserted after her husband had been brutally beaten and thrown, bound hand and foot, into the water, the slayers forced her to accompany them in a canoe, from which the men threw the clothes they wore overboard, putting on some they carried in a bag. Mrs. Collins was aiding deputy sheriffs today in their search for clues.

A white twill bag found earlier on the shore of Center Island near the place where the trousers were picked up, also will be shown to Mrs. Collins.

C. E. Mitchell Charged With Selling Bull Under Quarantine

DES MOINES.—(INS).—Five hundred and fifty national guardsmen on duty enforcing martial law in Cedar county have been recalled, and will leave Tipton Tuesday morning. Col. Charles Grahl, of the staff of adjutant W. H. Bailey, announced today.

The troops that have been recalled are companies A, B, C, D, E, F, G, and H of the 133rd Infantry, and the headquarters company of the first battalion of headquarters company. The units will return to their respective headquarters which are: Company A, Dubuque, B, Waterloo, C, Cedar Rapids, D, Waterloo, E, Webster City, F, Mason City, G, Fort Dodge, H, Mason City. The headquarters company of the first battalion will return to Cedar Rapids, Grahl stated.

With the withdrawal of the troops, approximately 1,100 men will be left at the "Front."

TIPTON, Ia.—(INS).—Nine more persons are under military arrest here today as Iowa national guardsmen continue their enforcement of the low tuberculosis testing law and the liquor laws here, under martial law which began last week when 1600 troops answered a call to arms by Governor Turner.

C. E. Mitchell of Tipton who farm is located at the city limit was arrested on a charge of having sold a Black Angus bull which was under quarantine. Mitchell is alleged to have been made on trust 25th to the Farmers Union in Chicago.

Mitchell was taken to grounds camp here of the guardsmen and placed in another of the cells that during the fair quarter the livestock.

Hold Dry Law Violators

Eight others were arrested early Sunday by a detachment of twelve military police who were working in cooperation with Cedar county sheriff Foster Maxson in an attempt to stop the flow of liquor into Tipton since the arrival of the troops.

All of the arrests were made in Tipton.

Mr. and Mrs. Cyril Innes were arrested at their home in the southern part of the city and although no liquor was found in their possession officers said sufficient evidence was found to hold them on a charge of maintaining a liquor nuisance.

William Doyle, Theodore Flunkett, Gerald Flunkett, Harry Truman, and John Murphy of Iowa City were the others arrested. Innes, his wife and Doyle were placed in the county jail while the others were taken to the camp headquarters.

All were turned over to civil authorities. It was announced by camp officials Sunday night.

Meanwhile troops continued to hold about the county in large motor trucks to enforce the tuberculosis test law. Readings of tests made last week were to be made today.

Readings of Tests

Readings of tests made last Thursday in the southern part of the county were made today by the Philip Scharff, Ed Hamann, W. F. Hamann, Albert Lillenthal, G. J. Ormsby, William Hogan, Nick Olden, Roger, Harry Duffy and George Wathman herds.

All herds were passed as clean except the Scharff and Wathman

BOND FILED BY BANK RECEIVER

L. A. Andrew Posts His Bond of $75,000 In Court Here

L. A. Andrew, state superintendent of banking, who has been appointed as receiver for the American Savings Bank, which failed to open last Monday, filed his bond today in the amount of $75,000 with the clerk of the district court.

The Actna Casualty and Surety company of Hartford, Ct., is the bonding company for the receiver.

L. J. Clarke, state examiner in charge of the closed bank, returned here today after spending Sunday with his family at Ft. Madison. He was busy today with plans for opening the bank on Thursday morning, when statements of account will be given by depositors, payments on notes will be received and access to safety vaults will be given.

BAKER SPEAKS TO TWO LARGE CROWDS SUNDAY

Promises to Deliver Second Talk When Crowd Gathers

ty the crowd, called for Mr. Baker. He appeared at the gate entrance, mounted the fenders of an automobile and addressed the crowd, telling them it was not his arrangement, that he did not know there would be a gate fee, and that the committee to pay for the banquet, loud speakers and K-TNT artists, had placed an admission charge to take care of the expenses. Possibly a thousand or more persons were inside the gate but hundreds stood in wait outside.

Promises Another Talk
Mr. Baker was asked by the crowd on the outside of the fence if he would not address them and this time the finality of the matter. He said he would not address them at a station touring camp one and one-half miles east of Ladora on route No. 32.

This pleased the crowd who before had threatened to tear the fence down and members of which had many arguments with the committee men at the gate. The air, being settled peacefully, Mr. Baker returned to the speaker's stand some three blocks from the gate.

For a stand Mr. Porter, a member of the committee in charge of making arrangements for Mr. Baker's appearance in Koszta, had put a new floor in his rack.

"I arranged this rack so I can take it back home and point to it as the hyack from which the governor of Iowa spoke," he said and Mr. Baker accepted the compliment in jest.

Before Mr. Baker was called to the gate to pacify the crowd there, W. C. Carpenter of the Free Press had introduced "Walter and Jack," the "K-TNT Kids." When they finished their program, Mr. Carpenter, not knowing of Mr. Baker's absence, introduced the speaker.

When the introduction was finished, that he had gone.

Cedar County Discussed
In his address Mr. Baker touched upon the Cedar county affair, in which all are interested, and explained the Baker plan of the single unit farm organization which, he said, could be called the "United Farm Federation." He did not urge a new farm association being formed until the farmers had failed to select one of the three plans, but have not been able to do so. The best method would be to form a new organization.

"Farmers," he said, "you can judge anyone by their accomplishments and I judge you by the fact you have accomplished. You have been members of the Farm Bureau, Farm Union, Farm Grange for more than 15 years and on top of that have been successful. You have been successful in two years, you have been successful in about $125,000 of Uncle Sam's money at your disposal."

"Are you satisfied with your accomplishments?" he asked and answered the question himself. "No," he said, "you are not, because all you have to show for it is 15 cents wheat, 16 cents oats and 32 cents corn."

The audience applauded the speaker's statement and when one farmer called out "Mr. Baker, you are too high on your prices," the crowd applauded again.

Single Unit Applauded
Cheers also greeted the speaker's explanation of the single unit farm plan and there appears to be no question but what the majority of farmers favor a united organization for farmers. The speaker's desire of having it started at once so they could join. The ladies present seemed to agree with the men in the thought that it is the only way out for the farmers.

The editor of the Marengo newspaper came in for his share of lambast from Mr. Baker. It appears that through a misunderstanding over the telephone, Marengo was booked for 4 p. m. also, all on the same day.

To relieve the situation, after Marengo folks had announced the meeting, Mr. Baker agreed to speak there in the evening at 8 p. m. and J. W. Lenker of Cedar county addressed the crowd in the afternoon.

The day was fairly warm and the rain started just after Mr. Baker began his speech. Following the meeting there the Baker party drove to Marengo through an unusually heavy rain which appeared to be the forerunner of a cyclone. Naturally the meeting there was cancelled although the editor of the paper there said about 100 were present. Mr. Baker did not go to the grounds where the speaking was to be held, believing no one could get to the beach through the mud roads leading to it.

Marengo Editor Lambasted
The Marengo editor published an article detrimental to Mr. Baker and tried to belittle the afternoon meeting where Mr. Baker did not appear. He was the subject of some scathing remarks from the speaker, who, it seems, can deliver them on occasion as few other men can. The remarks were not repeated by rounds of applause, showing his standing in that district does not seem to be overly "hot."

Mr. Baker closed by remarking that such editors some day will find that because they try to knock or kill everything the independent farmer wants to do, and because they object when they are not consulted as to whom the farmers shall or shall not hear, they will eventually find their subscriptions falling off.

It is interesting from a newspaper man's standpoint to watch the battle being waged between Mr. Baker and some few newspapers who attack him. The friction comes because these papers have branded Mr. Baker a "quack" and a radical. The Muscatine man goes into the cities where such editors live, or in the immediate vicinity, and tells

Speaking Dates Of Norman Baker

Many of our friends have phoned and written us regarding the various speaking dates arranged for Norman Baker, and we are pleased to mention them as follows:

Sept. 30 - Millersburg, Ia. Speaking at 1:30 p. m. K-TNT Kids to be on program. Admission will be charged at gate for baggage.

Oct. 1 - Oxford, Ia. - Speaking at 2:30 p. m. Auspices of Commercial club.

Oct. 4-6 - Naturopathic association state convention, Indianapolis, Ind.

Nov. 6 - Des Moines, Ia. Junior Chamber and Commercial. Speaking at 12 Noon.

Speaking dates can be arranged for the appearance of Mr. Baker. Address him at Muscatine, Iowa.

the story, which always means that many cancel their subscriptions in behalf of their own cause. So far all the knocking of the other papers has seemed to increase the circulation of the Free Press and place Mr. Baker in a stronger position with the farmer, laborers as well as the thousands of city people who gather at the meetings where he is scheduled to speak.

Mr. Baker ever does run for governor of Iowa, which many have asked him to do, and if he is elected, the newspapers, by their knocking will have helped him more than they could have helped him.

Medical Trust Rapped
The speaker also rapped the medical trust the T. B. tester's actions of printing state wide statements attributed to Dr. Mayo on tuberculosis testing, which Mr. Baker branded as subtle propaganda in order to break down his side of the story.

They say they think so and so, but never offer proofs of their assertions," Mr. Baker said. He also declared that the farmers are tired of hearing what somebody says. This statement was met with great applause, showing the farmers are awakening to the propaganda.

"Did the paper tell the truth when they said the soldier boys or guardsmen argued with you about moving your car in Tipton," a member of the crowd asked Mr. Baker.

"I parked my car at the depot in Tipton about 1:30 p. m. Tuesday," Mr. Baker replied. "It stood there until nearly 5 p. m. long after the soldiers had unloaded from the train and after they had marched away. No guardsmen or official in any capacity even spoke to me or had occasion to. I would have gladly removed my car had it been in the way, but was never requested to move it by anyone," he continued.

"These are the facts," the speaker said, "about the matter, and I am sure you will all agree with me."

"That's not all," the speaker told his hearers, "those little, petty, untruths could only start with such papers as the Journal, the Journal, the Des Moines Register and the Cedar Rapids Gazette and are started no doubt to work up a hatred against me to turn you fellows against me. I am sure you will all agree with me."

It was a Baker crowd through the afternoon and its support was shown by the fact that more subscriptions for the Free Press was sold than at any previous meeting. No doubt those editors in the vicinity who have been knocking the "quack" are now changing their call them at which Mr. Baker speaks, will find some loss in subscriptions soon. Several farmers urged such cancellations after the meeting.

Following his talk at Koszta, Mr. Baker and party drove to Ladora for supper and arrived at the oil station camp grounds at 6:45 p. m. On a few cars were parked outside the Baker party arrived, but before 7 p. m. more than 1,000 persons were present and at 7:15 p. m. Mr. Baker started his address and by the time the crowd was between 1,500 and 1,800 people. A total of 476 cars were counted. One man said he brought eleven in his automobile and another seven. Four were stationed on the main highway to regulate the traffic. No accidents occurred, but during Mr. Baker's talk he was requested to announce for a certain party, whose mother was reported seriously hurt in an auto accident away from the station grounds.

The marvelous thing about the evening meeting was where did all the people come from and how did they know Mr. Baker was to speak? The day was fairly warm and the rain started just after Mr. Baker began his speech. Following the meeting there the Baker party drove to Marengo through an unusually heavy rain which appeared to be the forerunner of a cyclone. Naturally the meeting there was cancelled although the editor of the paper there said about 100 were present. Mr. Baker did not go to the grounds where the speaking was to be held, believing no one could get to the beach through the mud roads leading to it.

Many Subscriptions Sold
At the meeting where more than 1,500 subscriptions were sold than at the afternoon gathering, and to accommodate the people owners of nearby autos turned on their lights so that subscriptions could be taken.

The meeting was held back from the road with no lights of any kind but it seemed that everything worked in favor of the farmers and the meeting, because the moon, having been under the clouds, came out and afforded light.

The Baker party arrived in Muscatine at 12 midnight, and Mr. Baker spoke over two hours at both places without the pub address system because there were no electric lines near for its operation.

Mr. Baker speaks at Millersburg, Ia., Wednesday evening at 1:30 p. m. To avoid an occurrence similar to the one at Koszta, it may be mentioned that at Millersburg, a gate admission will be charged, but it understood there will be an "Ox Barbecue" with free eats.

but have been inarticulate or have been steam-rollered by their leaders.

"It is self-evident," he said, "that the action taken by the Legion delegates is not representative of the whole body of Legionnaires, but was rather practically the expression of merely personal opinion by a small group of those who were mustered into the service. The great body of these ex-soldiers who have not found opportunity for expression will be reached by special endeavors by these dry organizations which are fighting today battle against alcoholism and against the liquor enemies of the constitutions."

Similarly, he said, special campaigns will be directed toward the hundreds of thousands of members of labor unions whose support of prohibition is being ignored by professional labor leaders.

An appeal for the legal and medical associations, Cherrington asserted: "The lawyers of the country who support the 18th amendment will be given special attention in the plans for the 1932 campaign. The fact that a majority of the physicians of the country do not avail themselves of the opportunity to obtain permits for the medicinal use of liquor is one of the most significant indications of the attitude of the medical profession toward the question of intoxicating beverages."

Although the American Legion was not singled out above the bar association, medical association, and the federation of labor, it was the Legion's action that spurred the dry leaders.

As do others recognize that the Legion is politically the most powerful influence operating around the halls of congress, as evidenced by the almost complete sweep of the Legion has made of its program since the war. Even presidential vetoes have been overridden with impunity at a nod from Legion leaders.

With the ex-soldiers coming along in step with the doctors, the lawyers, and organized labor in the country, the allied dry leaders believe the time has come when something must be done.

Graduation Is Held
For Sunday School
At Baptist Church

Graduation exercises were held Sunday at the First Baptist church with members of the cradle roll being promoted into the beginners' department, the beginners into the primary, the primary into the intermediate class, the exercises were held during the Sunday school hour.

Following the morning service the graduation of the three year teacher's training class was a special feature. Leonard Plessy, as speaker, gave a review of the second year work. Mrs. Anna Young gave a review of the third year, while John Mueller expounded upon the entire course. The Rev. Vernon L. Shontz talked on "Religious Training of Children."

Diplomas were issued to the following: Leonard Plessy, Mrs. Lucille DuBois, Burton Mark, John Mueller, Mrs. Emma Kiser, Helen Sechrist, Mrs. Mrs. Van Velsdyk, Mrs. Clara Dorn and Mrs. Helen Gensing.

Temperatures Due
For Rise, Weather
To Be Fair, Report

Continued fair and somewhat warmer weather is the state prediction for Muscatine and vicinity today. Tuesday, according to the forecast, will be partly cloudy and somewhat warmer in the east and central portions.

Today's 7 a. m. temperature reading showed 50 degrees, the same as on Sunday morning. Skies were partly overcast during the early hours this morning, but it cleared. The river stage today was above the low water level, a rise of one foot in the past twenty-four hours.

Although low temperatures were reported in Iowa on Sunday, there was no frost, according to the U. S. weather bureau. The highest temperature, 75, was reported at Alta, Boone, Estherville and Clarinda, while the lowest minimum, 64, was reported at Dubuque. The temperature Sunday night at Boone fell to 36, the weather bureau announced.

G. Gatton Charged With Issuing Bad
Checks; One Paid

Guy Gatton, arrested Sunday on a warrant sworn out at West Liberty charging him with issuing a false bank check, paid the amount of the check today, but was immediately placed in custody for the alleged issuance of other bad checks. He obtained his release under bonds of $300 and will have a hearing before Justice J. C. Coster on Oct. 6.

Two other men, arrested by police Sunday in the alley near the city hall, when it is said they were intoxicated, were tried this morning before Justice H. D. Horst. Each was fined $5 and costs.

Claude Webster, arrested on a charge of having been intoxicated was given a 30-day suspended jail sentence upon payment of the costs.

Franco-German Amity Practically Assured

President of Germany
Receives Statesmen
From France

BERLIN (INS)—In an atmosphere of friendliness promising greater Franco-German amity than at any time in centuries, the two leading statesmen of France were received by President Paul von Hindenburg today.

M. Pierre Laval, Premier of France, and Foreign Minister Aristide Briand, apostle of peace and unceasing champion of Franco-German co-operation, spent fifteen minutes with the octogenarian president of the German republic. An unconfirmed report was current in official circles to the effect Premier Laval was endeavoring to obtain an invitation from Washington for Chancellor Bruening to visit President Hoover. The French premier is scheduled to leave on October 16 for such a visit, and he was understood to be of the opinion that a similar meeting between Bruening and Mr. Hoover would greatly aid the general European situation.

Reports emanating from Geneva last week to the effect Bruening was taking an active part in preliminary negotiations leading to such a visit met with an instant denial in official quarters here.

AROUND THE CORNER

The following building permits were issued today from the office of H. H. Fitzgerald, city engineer: A. Stolzenau to rehang a frame garage on East Sixth street between Poplar and Cypress streets at a cost of about $20; J. B. Brown to erect a concrete garage on West Front street between Broadway and Cherry streets which will cost approximately $600.

The following desks were recorded Saturday: W. E. Downer and others to Leo K. Stalkleet, north one-half of lot 5 and all of lot 6, block 1, Fullam's addition to Muscatine; J. Frank Orr to W. B. Cox, sheriff's deed to parts of lots 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, and 18, town of Ardron.

During the afternoon the troops passed in review before the general. It is estimated that 20,000 persons swarmed the fairgrounds during the afternoon which was declared visitors' day. At one time cars on their way to the camp grounds were lined up on the highway for more than a mile.

WILD GEESSE ON WAY TO SOUTH

Harbingers of Cold
Weather Observed
Near Muscatine

Presence of wild geese in the vicinity of Muscatine has been reported. The geese, which are reputed to be reliable weather prophets, are following the course of the Mississippi river and have been slowly wending their way south to spend the winter months.

Geesse and wild ducks will not remain where freezing temperatures occur daily. The geese are the first to start for the south. The annual migration begins at the first indication of cold weather.

Ducks, however, remain until late fall before their departure for the south. Many falling victims to guns of hunters while on their long flight.

Further Projects Are Announced by Bureau Directors

Additional projects outlined by the board of directors of the Muscatine County Farm Bureau for the coming year, were announced today by Carl Rylander, county agent.

The Farm Bureau picnic which was held recently at West Liberty, will become an annual affair and the Four-H club annual banquet will be continued. The banquet is usually held in the month of November.

A one-day horticultural school, at which the study of insects as relating to plant diseases will be discussed, will also be a project during the year.

HEIRS OBJECT TO NEW ACTION

C. A. Giesenhous Files
Resistance to Move
To Name Trustee

Jurisdiction of the probate court in entering any order or judgment against him, upon the appointment of a trustee to collect rents of the Haverkamp building, was attacked in a motion filed today by C. A. Giesenhous, former administrator of the estate of Frederick Giesenhous.

Hearing on the application of Harriett G. Smeenk, special administrator for the estate, for the appointment of a trustee, was held this morning before Judge D. V. Jackson, who continued the matter until Oct. 5, in order that answers could be filed.

The court jurisdiction is attacked by C. A. Giesenhous upon the grounds that he is one of the remaindermen in the property and he charges that the application for appointment of a trustee is an effort to take property from him without due process of law. He alleges that no notice of the action was served upon him, and that his attorneys heard of the action on Sept. 27, the day the application was filed.

He alleges that Harriett G. Smeenk, special administrator, has been serving in the real estate and that she is attempting to further the interests of Wilson A. Giesenhous, also that she is working against the interests of Annie Giesenhous, holder of a life interest in the estate, and the remaindermen, of which C. A. Giesenhous is one. He declares that there is no need for appointment of a trustee and asks that the action be dismissed.

MRS. MARY GELTZ DIES HERE TODAY

Mrs. Mary Geltz, 605 West Sixth street, a resident of this city all her life, died this morning at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Lenny Orr, 511 West Fifth street, following a lingering illness of four months.

Broadwayite Beards the Rumba in Its Native Cuba

By DAVID P. SENTNER
Dramatic Editor

HAVANA, Cuba. — (INS) — Without the aid of a tom-tom, I shall attempt to lecture on the rumba which is supposed to be a dance of Spanish parentage but born in the jungles of Cuba. Rumbos (Spanish) — one of the 32 points of the mariner's compass, or the course of a ship. Rumbos (Spanish) — magnificent or liberal. The rumba isn't in the dictionary — it is in the jungle. Inasmuch as the natives of the Cuban interior were dancing with sun-powder in their eyes during my visit here, I confined my scholarly work on the rumba to observations in a "hot spot" night club and on coconut groves around the outskirts of this capital.

There are many schools of rumba dancers. There is the kindergarten school, as imported to Broadway, where rhythm, melody and grace blend poetically. There is the collegiate rumba wherein the feminine partner performs intricate steps as her masculine appendage loafs casually on a pair of mythical thin dime on the dance-flooring. But beneath the tropical palms of a rock-ribbed dancing arena outside of Havana I saw several scores of Cuban negroes, closer to the primeval than the white natives, dancing the rumba as they knew it and felt it. They did not expect an American observer and he had I doubt whether it would have made a movement's difference. I am no watchmaker so I can-

New-Old Styles Bring Odd Items In Accessories

PARIS — (INS) — The new-old fashions are calling for many changes in accessories.

The perfumes of twelve months ago will not do at all with the little tilted hats and Victorian fur-bows. They are entirely too sophisticated. Fashionable perfumes are coming out with quaint old-fashioned scents which hint of gardens of hellotrope, verberna, candy tuft and mignonette. They are exceedingly delicate and dainty, also very ladylike.

Worth is suggesting short gloves for evening wear with gowns of the Second Empire and they come in delicate shades in lightweight ends with narrow pink scalloped cuffs. There are also new ostrich feather fans with the fronds of the ostrich much elongated. They are not more than 6-inches wide when opened and there are quaint three-cornered scarves also edged with the ostrich to be thrown around the throat looking much like the old feather box.

Long scarves with fur ends can be used for old-fashioned little muffs to keep the fingers warm and there are straight and narrow filet scarves for evening with long fringed ends and rhinestones set in the fillet. Earrings will be important this winter and have necklaces to match. Pale blue, pink or white satin evening bags are long and have crystal clasps; small white bags are embroidered in eyelets. Handkerchiefs come in two-color effects.

A sweet filling for sandwiches can be made by mixing chopped dates, figs and raisins with a little sweet cream. Spread on buttered slices of Graham bread this makes a suitable sandwich for the child's lunch box.

DARE :: :: INTERPRETS the MODE

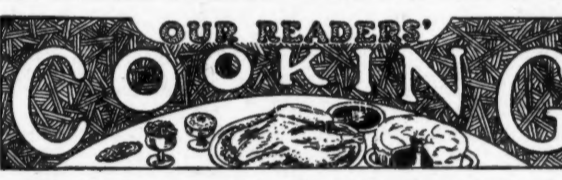

The round blue fox collar of this black rough woolen coat ties with a woolen bow, and there are large fox cuffs diagonally applied.

line down to about nine inches from the ground, but the experiment wasn't at all successful. The only thing in its favor was an added length and grace of line, but that isn't enough for today's fashionable woman, who must be comfortable while she is lovely. Just the same, last season's accepted daytime length was thirteen inches, so longer skirts do prevail. I wonder now, if by adding length to our clothes slyly, a half inch or an inch at a time, the couturiers are planning to gently but firmly accustom us to longer skirts for daytime? Maybe this is a pretty good idea, too, for we grant the attractiveness of longer skirts even though we can't negotiate street cars and busses so well in them!

IMPORTANT coats this winter will be those whose collars show unusually skilled and imaginative treatment — and if the effect is as smart as in the coat I have sketched for you today, lovely ladies will heartily approve. The coat itself is of rough, spongy black woolen material, cut very simply, and buttoning well over on the left side. The round, luxurious collar of natural blue fox fastens at the side, too, with a bow of the black woolen material. 'N' the fur cuffs start at the elbow, and of semi-spiral around the front where they stop, just above the plain little turned-back cuff of the coat itself.

It's well to remember when you buy YOUR winter coats, my dear, that the simpler the coat itself, the more effectively will it contrast novel fur treatments. 'N' WHI' we're on the subject of coats, let's illustrate a charming little evening jacket, which, after all, is a young member of the coat family! It's of rose chiffon velvet, tucked about the waist, and with tiered, bell-shaped and milk trimmed sleeves! An Reveal!

Marbled Angel Food Cake
1-1/4 cups of egg whites, 2 egg yolks, 1-1/2 cups sugar, 1 tsp. cream of tartar, 1 cup flour, 1 tsp. baking powder, 1-4 tsp. salt.

Beat egg whites with flat whip. Add cream of tartar when whites are frothy. Continue beating until a tint of egg whites stands up. Gradually beat in 1 cup sugar which has been sifted three times. Fold in flour, sifted flour once before measuring. Sift flour three times with salt and the remaining 1-2 cup of sugar and fold in with egg mixture. Measure out 1-1/2 cups of the mixture in a separate bowl and add to this the two well-beaten egg yolks. Put the two mixtures in greased pan in alternate layers and bake 1 hour in a slow oven at 320 degrees. For chocolate angel cake substitute 1-4 cup of cocoa for 1-4 cup of flour. Sift cocoa with flour. Omit egg yolks. Mix and bake as for plain angel food cake. — Mrs. Carl H. Selfert, Homestead, Iowa.

Banana Tapioca Cream
Scald two cups of milk. Add 3 tablespoons of minute tapioca and cook until tapioca is transparent. Add 2 egg yolks mixed with 3 tablespoons of sugar and 1-4 tablespoon of salt. Stir and cook 2 minutes. Cool and add 1-2 teaspoon of vanilla. Slice 3 bananas. Put one-third of the custard in and cover with bananas. Add custard and bananas in layers until all is used. Cover with a thin layer of beaten egg whites and 3 tablespoons of sugar. Dot with blackberry jelly and brown slightly. — Mrs. H. J. Wiele, West Burlington, Iowa.

Brown Sugar Candy
2 cups white sugar, 1 cup brown sugar, 2 tbsps. syrup, 1 cup cream, 1 tsp. vanilla. Mix and cook until it forms a hard ball in cold water. Add nut meats, if desired, and beat until thick. — Mrs. Warren Hofer, Reynolds, Ill.

CHAPTER XXVI
ALL during that drive to Mrs. Hutton's apartment Phyllis crouched in the back seat of the car. She could not think clearly, she could only, in a state of acute misery, pray for the courage to carry out her program. She remembered how once before when she had tried to talk to Mrs. Hutton she had been forced to do the latter's bidding. This time, however, Mrs. Hutton would not be prepared. Phyllis would take her by surprise, and storm the fortress before the enemy was aware of danger.

Mrs. Hutton was in. "Say that I wish to speak to her at once, in her room, will you please, Marie?" Marie tripped away and returned to say that Mrs. Hutton was resting before dinner, but would see the girl immediately if it were important. "I will go right in, Marie, you need not go back to tell her I am coming."

Mrs. Hutton was resting on her chaise longue, surrounded by pillows, at ease in one of her trailing tuffy negligees. She looked up from the magazine she was reading as Phyllis entered and stretched out a languid hand. "What is it, my dear, some little trouble about money, or another stranger who claimed friendship and caught you unprepared?"

"No," Phyllis stood very straight and clasped her hands tightly in front of her, "no, it isn't that." "How serious you look, my dear. Come, tell me quickly, it makes me nervous to have you stand there as though we were about to have a fearful row."

"Count Slavin has asked me to marry him." Mrs. Hutton laughed her tinkling little laugh. "Yes? He is more of a fortune hunter than I had thought, and a gambler, too. Also he has broken a promise made to me, but then it doesn't matter a great deal, after all. But it does matter. The position is altogether changed. Count Slavin has come into the fortune he had lost and is quite ready to marry without regard for the amount of money his future wife might bring."

"He would laugh." "I still fail to see why you should be so upset about it. You will surely be free to do as you wish, and to him, if you haven't already given him this answer."

"I don't wish to say no to him," said Phyllis doggedly. "But Mrs. Hutton at bolt up-right and stared at the girl. "You are in love with Count Slavin?" she demanded.

Phyllis did not answer that directly, instead she said "I wish to be free to say yes to Count Slavin's proposal."

"You wish to be free to accept Count Slavin's proposal?" Mrs. Hutton asked, her eyes fixed on the astonished words.

"Yes." "And how do you expect to accomplish that, my dear girl?" "By telling him the truth about myself."

Mrs. Hutton laughed again. "Oh, you are so innocent, so naive. Do you suppose for one moment that he would consider marrying you if he did not believe you had an immense fortune in the background? Why, my dear child, he would simply laugh at you, and leave you cold. You're insane if you think he would marry you, penniless, nameless, an impostor. "I think he would," said Phyllis stubbornly. "Well," said Mrs. Hutton in exasperation, "just what do you expect me to do about it? I can assure you that I have no intention of telling him the truth, I'm too fond of you to want to see you hurt and laughed at and mocked. Really, my dear, you are being quite silly about this. There's nothing there with your eyes all wide and your face all white and your hands clenched in that melodramatic manner. After all, what has really happened—a man you've known and liked, who has been nice to you for several months, asks you to marry him. You thank him for the honor and decline. It's as simple as that, nothing to get excited about at all."

No Authority
"You don't understand, Mrs. Hutton, or else you don't want to understand. I wish to go back now to the studio, where Theodore is waiting for me. I wish to tell him all the truth about this wretched masquerade, and then if he still wishes to marry me, I will say 'yes' to him."

There was a long silence in the richly furnished boudoir. Mrs. Hutton searched Phyllis' face as though to read in it the amount of the girl's determination. "I forbid you to go," she said at last. "I forbid you to leave this house at all until I give you permission."

"You have no authority over me," Phyllis flared, "only the authority I have permitted you all these months. I'm going now, I'm going to tell the truth. Oh, you don't know how I have come to loathe and hate the lies I tell—there is a clear spot in me, I tell you. But I'm going to get rid of all this, and if Count Slavin doesn't want to marry me, I'll go back home where I belong. Thank heaven I have money enough to get away."

"Stop—wait," Mrs. Hutton sprang to her feet and pulled furiously at the connecting hall door, the stairs, forward as though to grab Phyllis' arm, tripped on her draperies and stumbled. Like a shadow the girl slipped out of the room, through the connecting hall, down the stairs, of voice. It was nothing though anxiety she waited for the lift, fearful that her chaperone would yet appear to stop her. Mrs. Hutton, however, had wished to send a message to the servants. With tantalizing slowness the elevator arrived. Phyllis stepped in, arrived at the ground floor, forced herself to walk slowly through the lobby, and then ran as one pursued to the curb and hailed a passing taxi.

"—East 12th street," she told the driver, "M. Rosoff's studio, and hurry as much as you can."

For Always
To Phyllis the taxi seemed to crawl. She had made a miraculous escape from Mrs. Hutton; she knew that. One moment's delay and Mrs. Hutton would have been quite capable of locking her into the room and keeping her there, by force if necessary. Suppose Mrs. Hutton had telephoned the Count at the studio? Suppose she summoned police or detectives to prevent her joining the Count? Suppose — oh suppose a thousand things. But what was all this supposing, it wouldn't alter things for her.

They were here now. Phyllis fumbled for her purse, extracted the key for her fare and stumbled up the steps of the old brownstone house. Her eyes were dilated and her face was white. Slavin met her at the door of the room and exclaimed when she told her. "But my dear child, what have you been doing? Here, come in, get warm by the fire. I am going to get you some brandy. You have had a terrible shock of some kind, no, not a word, until you have rested a little and are fit to talk. You are here with me now, let me take care of things."

As gently as a woman he led her into the room and placed her in a chair, taking off her hat, kneeling to unfasten her coat and lay it aside on her shoulders. While a servant went to get brandy he chafed her hands and murmured encouragement to her.

Phyllis' teeth were chattering from a nervous chill and she realized that she was near the end of her tether. The brandy came, she sipped it from the glass he held to her trembling lips and felt its warmth flow through her body. "Now," he said to her, "you will lie back against this chair and close your eyes until you are able to talk. Then you will tell me your story, since it will ease your mind to do so, and tomorrow we will be married, even the way your friend Kay was married, and I will take care of you for always."

From the Beginning
His voice soothed and rested her and she was conscious of an immense gratitude to him. To be taken care of, for always, by this man who meant to be her husband, who thought of her before himself. What more could any woman ask?

It was fully five minutes before she opened her eyes. He was standing before her, looking down at her tenderly. "Don't hurry," he ordered, "we have all the time in the world now. Don't speak until you are ready."

Phyllis lay there in a daze. In the street she heard the shriek of brakes as some car drew to a hasty stop in front of the house. There were hurried steps as of some one running, but they didn't concern her, of course. Never again in all her life would she have to hurry. The bell rang at the door of the house, and there was the murmur of voices, but they didn't concern her, she needed pay no attention to, same caller for M. Rosoff. She wondered idly where that astute gentleman could be, and what he might be thinking of his pupil and his old friend, slunk away in his studio.

"I can talk now," she said after a moment. Queer how loud those voices were in the hallway outside the door of the studio. "Whenever you wish," he repeated.

"Well, then, I'm going to go back and tell you the story from the very beginning so you will understand all of it. But before I begin I want to tell you the one big thing you must know, the thing that is the background of all I have to say."

She leaned forward, then, wishing to impress him she got to her feet and stood very straight and tall and fair, her hands held out in an appeal for him to believe, "I am not."

"Good afternoon." Both Phyllis and Count Slavin whirled toward the door, toward the speaker who stood in the entrance, halting them by something urgent in his voice, banal though the words were.

As We See It

The Legion's Dangerous Proposal

At its recent national convention the American Legion adopted a resolution urging President Hoover to declare a national emergency and reconstitute the war-time council of national defense, with dictatorial power to solve the economic problems of the country. The resolution was sponsored by Mr. Howard Coffin, a member of the national defense body during the World War, and it is said to have been privately commended by President Hoover.

This country has not faced a more dangerous proposal since the World War. It amounts to nothing less than a proposal to use the present depression as an excuse to fasten a dictatorship upon America. The dictatorship would be military in character with the President as dictator. The country would be at the mercy of the President and his "emergency council," backed by the military. Under present conditions if America falls under a dictatorship it is doubtful if we could go back to constitutional law and representative government with anything short of a revolution.

The fact that makes such a proposal particularly dangerous at this time is that there has been a very powerful and persistent movement from military and Legion sources since the World War to create the machinery of a military dictatorship ready for use in any national emergency in which the President would be constituted the judge and jury in the case.

In fact we have the partial machinery of a military dictatorship already in the form of a militia measure which constitutes every able-bodied male citizen between the ages of 18 and 45 a potential member of the militia subject to call by the President in case of a national "emergency" in which the President would be the sole judge. Not content with this, Johnson of South Dakota, a member of the American Legion, who is backed by the Legion, is pushing a measure that would not only make every able-bodied citizen of military age subject to draft in case of a national emergency, but would make all American labor in war-time subject to draft in industry under a military dictatorship headed by the President. This measure makes a pretense of standing for an equal draft on property, but a close analysis of it shows that this is pure humbug. Far from making capital as well as labor subject to draft, it proposes an organization of big capitalists who would have advisory and supervisory rights over industry under the military dictatorship. In fact property would not be drafted at all—only men would be drafted and killed, while the most that would be done to property would be a pretense at limiting profits.

It is important that the people of the United States realize from whence this continual pressure for a military dictatorship emanates. It emanates from big business and high financial sources in deadly fear of the consequences of their horribly mismanaged industrial and financial system which is throwing millions out of work, slashing wages and driving the masses to desperation. Military dictatorships, like that of Mussolini in Italy, have prevented revolutions of the people and the establishment of a truly democratic order in Western Europe, while the absence of a capitalistic dictatorship in Russia allowed the Russian Revolution to succeed. Capital is in deadly fear of revolution all over the world and no capital is more fearful than American capital.

It is heart-rending that the American Legion should continually lend itself to such subversive movements aimed at the overthrow of democracy in America. The Legion has fallen into the hands of reactionary officers who are willing tools of our industrial and financial rulers. There should be an assertion of the rank and file and a thorough house-cleaning in this body of ex-war veterans. Let the Legion make good its noble war purpose—to make the world safe for democracy.

Jake Lenker and the Cause

Just why was it necessary, in connection with the arrest and jailing of J. W. Lenker, that he be denied the right to inform his anxious family; that he be secretly locked in a stable and not even furnished a seat or cot for some time; that he be rushed to a reformatory, denied consultation with a lawyer and told by General Findley, "You are entitled to nothing?"

Why did the papers charging him with contempt, in resisting the T. B. test, have to be removed from the court house and not entered on the docket until time for his trial at Cedar Rapids? Why was it necessary for Mr. Lenker's attorney to institute a hunt for Mr. Lenker before he could locate him and give him advantage of the constitutional rights to which every American citizen is entitled?

Is it because the civil authorities are afraid of the Lenker case and dare not proceed along strictly regular and legal lines, or is this a manifestation of methods military authorities feel that they have to use in order to properly impress the public? If so, all we have to say is that both arms of the law in this case are mistaken. Nothing arouses disrespect for the law so certainly as irregular, brutal or illegal handling of such cases.

While the law must be obeyed, and none of the farmers wish to break the law or use violence, it does seem that such treatment under such conditions is unwarranted.

Is the whole affair a plot to belittle those who dare to voice their opinions about the T. B. test at a time when martial law makes such treatment of those opposed to the T. B. test possible? For instance, the Des Moines Register carried a story about Norman Baker and a soldier arguing about the moving of Mr. Baker's car. This report was utterly without foundation. There was no argument over a car. In fact, Mr. Baker did not have the opportunity at any time to talk with a member of the state militia.

Another indication of such a purpose is the fact that most of the newspapers throughout the state contain nothing giving the farmers' side of the controversy. Is this fulfilling the purpose of the newspapers as public institutions obligated to give impartially both sides of all controversies, or is it evidence of a conspiracy and a nasty political racket? The jailing of this leader of the farmers and this attitude of most of the newspapers will only increase the resentment of the farmers who control 62 per cent of the vote and whose memories are not short.

Let Lenker's case be settled in a fair, decent, legal way. The facts will show that Lenker has never advocated violence, nor has Mr. Baker.

Our Platform for the People Is:

1. Less taxation.
2. Fewer State Commissions.
3. Universal school books.
4. Lower freight rates.
5. Return of river transportation.
6. A cleanup of some state institutions.
7. More efficiency in public offices.

The Evening Story

NEIGHBORS

By ETNA WEBB

Ivan awoke with a start. There was a noise outside his open window. There was a rumble accompanied by a motion that seemed to tug at the loosely built house. He had noticed something like it before.

There was a pulley clothesline fastened to the corner of his house. It belonged to the family who lived in the adjoining house. The woman who hung clothes on the pulley line was an early riser. Daylight was none too early for her to be up and about, she was washing. Sometimes she sang in a sweet, clear voice old airs like "In the Gloaming." Ivan hated "In the Gloaming." It made him think of a girl he had once loved. The girl had married his chum, Ivan had never married. He vowed he never would. That was why he was living all alone in his house. He felt he would have been perfectly happy if it had not been for that pulley clothesline under his window.

He had never seen the woman close enough to really tell how she looked. She seemed to be small and slightly gray. She wore blue dresses. The family seemed to be addicted to blue. There were always blue dresses, blue rompers and blue overalls on the line. The man seemed to be younger than his wife. The baby looked like his father, red-headed and sturdy. They did not seem to be a bad lot, but Ivan hated that clothesline. Sesaw, speak, tug, rumble! There it was again, peaking. That peaking woman certainly was at it early. Ivan raised up on his elbow and looked at his watch. Five o'clock! This was really too much to put up with. Throwing back the covers he jumped out of bed, reached for a pair of scissors from the bureau and ran to the window. Reaching out he snipped the clothesline.

The instant he had committed the act he was sorry. He tried to get a glimpse of the damage he had done but the fog was so dense he could only discern dim outlines. He was honestly ashamed of himself. His lean honest face burned with embarrassment. He felt he deserved a good kick. The poor little woman! Her husband ought to thrash him.

"I'm getting cranky, living alone," he thought wretchedly. He went back to bed, but not to sleep. Finally he got up and got his simple breakfast. The gas stove did not work right. The coffee was not good, the fried eggs were tough. He realized suddenly he was sick of fried eggs, rolls and coffee with muddy bottom. The family who owned the pulley clothesline always had pancakes. He could smell them.

He kept thinking of the severed clothesline. He finally decided if he was to live at peace with himself he must replace that clothesline. As soon as he could get into a store Ivan went downtown. He returned with a new clothesline, pulleys and all, in a parcel under his arm. It had cost him several dollars. He looked grim. He did not part with his money easily. It was part of the punishment he had imposed upon himself.

The fog was still heavy about the house when Ivan marched up to his neighbor's back door. The little woman in blue answered his timid knock. He held out the parcel. "Here's your clothesline. I'm here to make a clean breast of it," Ivan's face was crimson. "I cut down your line," he stammered. He noticed her dress exactly matched the blue of her eyes. There was a dimple in her cheek. She was a little fellow himself," she said, laughing. "I was brought up by that rule, there is none better. I see you had the same training. Go ahead and put up the line, I forgive you."

"You stay out here and boss the job," Ivan pleaded.

"Sure I will," the little woman agreed heartily. "It was puttery work putting up the new line. But Ivan made a good job of it. He found he was no handier with the hammer than he was with the frying pan, but contrition eased him on."

"You done fine," the woman said when the line was finally adjusted properly. "Now I'll get my washing out. Land knows I've spent time enough gabbing this morning."

"It's been a hectic morning, all right. Enough to upset even the nerves of a widow. First it was the earthquake, then my line was—"

"Widow! Earthquake!" exclaimed Ivan. "Are you a widow—I thought the man I saw round here was your husband."

"The flatterer you are. The boy is my son. And the baby is my grandson. But any one in this block who could sleep through the earthquake this morning—But there, you haven't told me why you cut down my clothesline. It was a dirty trick if I do say it."

Ivan gathered up hammer and nails before he spoke. "Did that earthquake come about daylight?" he demanded. "You've set the time exactly," said the little woman. "I thought every building in the block would tumble down."

"And I thought your clothesline was fairly tearing my house down. I cut your line because I was plain mad." He looked deep into the widow's sparkling eyes. He also became aware that her teeth were white and even. He felt suddenly happy as he went home. When Ivan came home from work that night the first thing he saw was a shining new tin pan turned upside down on his back porch. Funny. He stooped to pick it up. Out from under the pan came a delicious smell. His heart gave a leap. He snatched off the pan. Underneath was a big, freshly baked apple pie. Tucked under the pie was a note which read: "With the compliments of your neighbor."

Ivan ate a portion of the pie. Then he donned his best suit, tidied up and went over to thank the little widow. He found her rocking the baby to sleep. "My boy's out," she said. "He's courting."

"Well, so am I. Ivan's smile would have touched the heart of any woman. "If you aren't willing to become my wife you'd no business to send me that apple pie."

"Oh, go along with you," the widow's red lips dimpled into a smile. "A man who can't tell the difference between an earthquake and a pulley clothesline is no mate for the Widow Dana," but she kept on smiling as she said it. (Copyright 1931, by D. J. Walsh)

THE QUACKS GROW UNEASY

Peter Rabbit doesn't like the very hot weather of midsummer any more than you or I do. He cannot go to the seashore or the mountains as we can, and just think, he has to wear a fur coat all the time. Of course in this respect Peter is not worse off than a lot of his neighbors. In fact none of them likes the very hot weather.

So with the coming of the first cool days in September new life seemed to fill Peter. He loves the fall. Next to the spring he likes the fall best. But for two things he thinks he might even like it the best of all the year. Those two things are the coming of his friends who are leaving for the far away sunny Southland, or who are preparing to sleep all winter, and the fact that the fall brings the dreadful hunting season when men with terrible guns delight in springing terror and suffering over the Green Meadows, through the Green Forest, along the Laughing Brook, around the Smiling Pool, up in the Old Pasture and even deep in the Great Woods.

The fall is a busy time for Peter. You see there are so many friends to say good-by to that he is afraid that some will slip away before he sees them. The first of the cool days had already come and Peter was busy thinking of his friends who would not be long before many of his feathered friends started on their long journey. Everywhere he saw them in flocks now instead of in pairs, as he saw them in the spring. They were making up parties for the long journey, for they prefer to travel in this way. It is quite necessary, because you know there are so many young birds for whom this will be the first time to make the long journey, and they must be shown the way by the older birds. Then it always is much pleasanter to travel with company.

A great party of blackbirds flying over the dear Old Brier Patch reminded Peter that it was quite likely that certain other friends would soon be starting, among others, the Quack family, who had spent this summer in the pond of Paddy the Beaver. So the first chance he got Peter hurried over to Paddy's Pond deep in the Green Forest. He was half afraid that the half hope that they might decide to stay all winter. When he got there he found Mr. and Mrs. Quack and the ten young Quacks, the now as big as their father and mother, still there.

"Oh, I'm so glad!" cried Peter. "What are you so glad about?" demanded Mr. Quack, swimming in close to where Peter was sitting on the bank. "That you are still here," replied Peter. "I was afraid you might have gone away. Are you going to take that terrible journey again this year, Mr. Quack?"

"What else can I do?" Mr. Quack replied. "Why, stay here all winter the same as I do," replied Peter. "And what would we do when all the water has turned to ice, stupid?" demanded Mr. Quack. Peter looked foolish. "I hadn't thought of that," said he. "Of course you have to go where the water doesn't freeze. Just the same I think it is dreadful that you have to take that terrible journey."

"It wouldn't be so bad if it were not for the hunters near the Old Brier Patch yet?" Mr. Quack asked this anxiously.

"No," replied Peter. "This cool weather is sure to bring them out," replied Mr. Quack. "I almost wish we had started earlier, but we have been so happy here this summer that I cannot bear to leave until we have to. What's that?" Mr. Quack started nervously and stretched his head up to listen. All the other ducks did the same thing. It was only the snapping of a twig under Buster Bear's feet, and in a moment he appeared. At once the ducks dropped their heads and began swimming about again, for they did not fear Buster Bear. But it was very clear that they were uneasy, very uneasy indeed, especially Mr. and Mrs. Quack. The young Quacks had had no experience with hunters, but they were uneasy too. The truth is they were anxious to try their wings. They were looking forward to that long journey as something very wonderful. They were anxious to be on

People's Pulpit

People's Pulpit:—Dear Mr. Baker: I have never met you but have heard much about you and the great work you are doing in Iowa in the interest of farmers and labor.

I am glad to see that the farmers appreciate it. I am sure every farmer that is a subscriber will make it his job to get five to ten new subscriptions in order to teach them the truth. Get the paper in to all parts of Iowa. Teach the farmers the truth and the truth will make them free.

I used to live in Iowa. I would never have believed that the bosses could make the governor order the soldiers to fight the farmers. What would happen if Iowa had compulsory vaccination? It is serious. It reminds me of the dark ages. What do the ministers think? We need ministers with courage to stand for justice in times like this.

Read Dr. Charles Creighton, author of "Jenner and Vaccination." It will open your eyes. You can't think of a more Christian-like duty and surely pleasing in the sight of God, than to help practice—T. B. Test and Vaccination. Think of all the cases of paralysis now over the country.

The Citizens Medical Reference Bureau of N. Y. City took up the matter of infantile paralysis with the health department and asked for suspension of vaccination as a means of possible control.

Dr. Irons, a Physician and Specialist of National reputation, because of his wide research work in serum and vaccine therapy tells why he has repudiated serum and vaccines in the journal of the American Medical Association, April 18, 1931 and also the N. Y. State Journal of Medical January, 1931. This is an eye opener also.

Great men in business and politics for years holding the purse and honor of a community become involved and convicted of graft. Isn't the same opportunity here with that great medical trust—the opportunity to create any kind of disease that they wish and have some innocent physician do the work, doing it in all sincerity not knowing the contents of the serum or vaccine. How the Medical Trust can put this over on the rich, the preachers and their families, the bankers, lawyers and judges is beyond me; yes and over a great number of the physicians themselves, especially all the young ones. Most of the doctors are honest, especially those who don't belong to the trust. They are misled. It is the system that is corrupt. Break this corrupt system and there will be less diseases—easily 50 per cent less.

"YOUR YOUTH"

What is your age? Not in years, but in the way you feel. Are you old at 35 or are you young at 60? A man is no nearer death than is the physical degeneration of his tissues. A man's age should be measured by the condition of his tissues rather than by the number of years he has lived.

Physiological health means youth and the retention of your youthful faculties regardless of your age in years. A careless person of twenty-five may be nearer the end of his days than a careful man of forty-five. Physiological youth is really a state of mind. Worry, doubt, fear, self-distrust—these are the drops that wear down the physical energy of man and rob him of his youth.

For one who will always keep his mind's eye up ahead, accepting the daily trials as mere incidents of a road that has no end while going at the end of the road will come the fulfillment of his hopes. This person will have lived long enough to see his work bring forth fruit and he will have retained his youth so that he may enjoy his pleasures.

Dr. Frederick Tilley, professor of neurology, Columbia University, believes that no evidence has as yet been brought forward which conclusively proves that there is any such thing as an old brain. Due to our present day hurry, such a demand has been made upon the nervous energies of our bodies that there has developed a very prevalent condition—the nervous breakdown. Disintegration of the nerve cells and fibers by the successive accumulation of toxic materials over years of wrong living is no doubt the reason, at least, one of the very important factors of age of the brain and other body tissues.

Old age is mostly premature, due to abuse and neglect of the body. Youth is something besides suppleness and full red cheeks. These can be lost and regained through sickness and health measures. There is an inner youth, ever dominant over the physical appearance, which keeps one young in spite of every material obstacle just so long as one does not give up.

This inner youth, this finer spirit of one's being is that part of us which gives one the courage to take the world and its material hardships as it is, fighting them, using force, strength, or diplomacy, depending upon correct delineation of the circumstances at the time of action. It is this inner youthful their way. Something inside was urging them to start for their beautiful Southland. It is both that way with the young. They did not fear because they did not know.

feeling that is broad enough to shut out a big disappointment and get a kick out of a game of solitaire without grumbling and making others unhappy. It is this same inner youth that causes a man to challenge the events of time to dialogue him from his rightful place in the world and gives him the vigorous courage and mental stamina to get back on his feet again if he does get bumped off his perch.

One does not have to worry about wrinkles or gray hair when they possess this unlimited reservoir. A thousand year old diamonds will shine just as brightly as a freshly cut stone, and so will this inner youth or youthful state of mind shine through the graying wrinkles and soften them and make them becoming.

Today we are passing through a vital period, a period in which youth and age, according to years is changing and assuming responsibilities. This inner youth is coming to the surface and the older ones in years need not feel that they are being pushed aside, being discarded, both the young and the old feel that the physical, material appearance is being leveled and that the true human being is coming out into the light when everyone may see man as he is and each benefit by the new regime. This viewpoint is getting down to the true facts of living. Like the old time West, a man is judged for what he is and himself and not by what he had or by what his ancestors were. This new era which is coming forth is going to classify humans according to character and achievement rather than by age, sex, or size.

We should not be too hasty in associating retirement with years. Proper living with the right outlook will give the man, well along in years, a firm active brain and such a person will want to stay active and take an interest in things and make himself useful.

Age has a lot of earmarks of a narrowing of the person's outlook, a self-centered viewpoint which lacks a broad and sympathetic understanding of the chances of progression and humanity. Instead of fearing the weakness and pains of advancing years, one will live longer and stay younger by taking an interest in other things than himself. To retreat within one's self and nurse numerous aches and pains is to make one small, and vinds one down to old worn out customs and selfish desires; and brings about a lack of interest in those things which forms one's ideals and one's healthful well-being. Never mind if you do show signs of wear by your contact with the world, stay bright inside and you'll retain your youth.

Give It a Thought

By Joseph A. Sadony

You say you prayed to God, and were not answered. Did you expect to be answered? If not, you did not pray. For faith is your currency in the purchase from God. Nature is obedient to its Creator.

Are you? If you have done your best, and your conscience does not accuse you.

Your prayer has already been answered without your knowing it. Unless you know better than the Carpenter who whittled you out of earth's products, so you might please Him. Have you done this?—or only pleaded yourself? Praying for that which demands a little extra labor as payment . . .

—O—O—
Next time you pray, see whose move it is in your game of human chess. And don't play out of your turn.

—O—O—
An intelligent man fears an ignorant man. Because of that ignorant man's ignorance. An ignorant man fears an intelligent man. Because of that knowledge which is unknown to the ignorant. The suspicions of the ignorant create fear that weakens. The intelligent man is aware of that weakness.

So is strengthened. —O—O—
Is it not always the case that a man prays to God for a certain want after he has no want to pray for? Still he prays.

May it not simply be the spirit of God within. Manifesting Himself through the thanksgiving of faith. The soul's meditation of expression. Turning in just to feel that touch of divinity. An echo of the Creator.

Between two dangers choose the least. That is why so many young men enlist in the army instead of getting married.

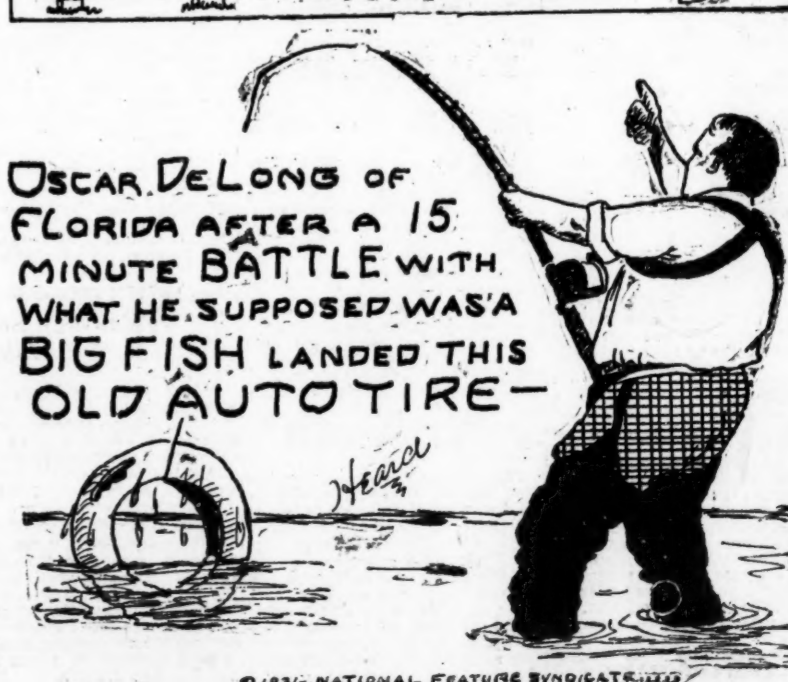

The girl who dislikes the odor of tobacco should never choose a man who chews.

Even the temperance orator sometimes has occasion to speak with bated breath.

Silly---BUT SO . . .

CHICK HAFEY'S NATIONAL LEAGUE BATTING KING

TUNNEY ASSERTS HE'S NOT GOING TO FIGHT AGAIN

Nothing Would Induce Him to Come Back, He Tells INS

By BRADLEY KELLEY
INS Staff Correspondent
STAMFORD, Conn.—"I am not going to return to the ring," Gene Tunney said emphatically in an exclusive interview granted today to the International News Service. "I seem to be the only person in the country not in doubt as to my re-entry into the boxing game."

Tunney was sitting in the flower-bordered garden of his little colonial home outside of Stamford. He was playing with a police dog and his statement which ended reports as to his coming back was made casually but in a tone which left no room for doubt. Gene Tunney is through with the ring. There can be no question about it.

"Recently a news story appeared in the papers," he continued "to the effect that I would come back to box Schmeling. I was in Maine at the time and didn't see the paper until four days later. Let me repeat, I have retired for good and nothing would induce me to come back. As for the patriotic argument advanced, I feel that boxing, like art, has no national boundaries and that the deciding of the heavy-weight championship is no occasion to bring out national anthems and fly flags. The same song is more appropriate, especially for the dethroned."

BIG TEN TEAMS MEET ON GRIDS THIS WEEK-END

Elvens Will Begin Major Battles on Saturday

By W. F. PETERSON
INS Sport Writer
CHICAGO—Football machines of the Big Ten, having disposed of the season's first week-end in their round of major hostilities.

This week-end practically all the teams in the conference will play "Big Time" competition. Only three of the Big Ten Elvens were in action last Saturday.

One of the most interesting contests on the horizon is that between Northwestern and Nebraska. An intersectional battle scheduled for the week-end is that between Iowa and Pittsburgh. Gridders of Indiana and Notre Dame will hold their perennial grudge duel.

Less Important Games
Games of less importance are St. Louis-Illinois, Cincinnati-Ohio State, and Oklahoma A. and M.-Minnesota.

Purdue, Michigan and Wisconsin will take on two opponents, providing the fans with bargain basement games.

Western Reserve and Coe will provide competition for the Bolle-makers. The Wolverines are to meet a pair of teachers' colleges in Mt. Pleasant and Ypsilanti. Wisconsin starts off the 1931 campaign by playing North Dakota Aggies and Bradley.

Chicago, which took a 7 to 0 licking from the Red Sox on Saturday, will be the only idle team in the conference this week-end.

Maroons Upset Victim
With the exception of the Maroons, the three Big Ten schools which went into action Saturday came off with honors.

Minnesota defeated North Dakota Aggies, 13 to 7, in a game which disclosed considerable rugged playing. In the second tilt of the double-header, the Minnesota Reserves trounced Ripon 30 to 0.

Indiana, working under a new coach and on a new system, eked out a 7 to 6 victory over Ohio University.

Thus, preventing the Ohioans from getting 20 wins in a row.

In their first game, Coach Stag's Maroons upset Cornell 12 to 7. Chicago's defeat at the hands of tiny Hillsdale college was attributed to the lack of reserves.

Vines Beats Perry For Pacific Coast Net Championship

LOS ANGELES, Cal. — (INS) — Ellsworth Vines, national tennis champion, today held the Pacific southwest tennis championship by virtue of his hard-fought victory over Fred Perry, England's star.

The match for the championship went five sets. Vines dropped the first one and the third. The score was 8-10, 6-4, 4-6, 7-5, 6-2.

The women's championship was won by Mrs. L. A. Harper, Oakland, who defeated Josephine Cruickshank, Santa Ana, Cal., 3-6, 6-3, 6-4.

Darkness overtook the doubles championship between Wilmer Allison and John Van Ryn, against Keith and Vincent Gledhill, Santa Barbara.

UPSETS FEATURE FIRST WEEK OF GRID SEASON

Southern California, Chicago and Penn State Beaten

BOSTON—The football season is a week old and Southern California, Chicago and Penn State have been beaten. Stanford has been tied and California, Indiana, West Virginia and Washington badly scored. Dartmouth, Minnesota, Nebraska and Alabama have been scored on. What an amazing start for the new football campaign.

Seldom has small college football struck any more forcefully on an opening day than was the case last Saturday. For the first time in the gap has been narrowing between the so-called big teams and little teams. Improved coaching, superior material and the development of the forward pass as a vital part of a team's running attack have done much for the small college.

Grid History Made
Probably never in the history of football has the major portion of the Pacific coast had such difficulty getting under way as resulted when Slip Madigan's St. Mary's team beat Southern California, while Stanford was held to a scoreless tie by the Olympic club and California was stumbling through a 6-2 win over Santa Clara.

Washington managed to beat Utah by a point after touchdown, but that game had promised to be a high-powered clash because of Utah's dominance of Rocky Mountain football during the last four seasons. Jimmy Phelan's Washington team scored a notable triumph over a team that had not been beaten since 1927.

In the conference, Chicago's defeat in the second game of a double-header indicates that it is impossible to whip a football squad into condition in 10 days for two hard games. Chicago beat Cornell, Iowa, 12-0, and lost to Hillsdale, 7-0. Hillsdale lost only two games a year ago, Chicago and Kalamazoo inflicting the defeats, each by a score of 21-0.

Eastern Teams Powerful
The three eastern teams which have been granted to have plenty of power, Dartmouth, Army and Cornell, galloped through soft games and were not disorganized by the heavy footing and generally poor conditions which prevailed throughout the week.

The forward pass has been more and more incorporated into the team's attack as a sure ground game, and perhaps the best exhibition of the day was given at Cornell, where the Red Terror completed 14 out of 17 attempts.

The coming week will find the colleges a week nearer to the point where they will be well matched. The western conference teams and Notre Dame, Harvard, Yale, Princeton, Navy and Pennsylvania all enter the gridiron lists. Certainly Notre Dame picks a tough one for its debut. Indiana, its opponent, only beat Ohio University, 7 to 6, Saturday, but it was the latter's first defeat in 18 games.

BIG MUSKIES IN FIRST WORKOUT

Twenty-One Prospects Given Hour Drill At Weed Park

Twenty-one likely looking Big Musky football prospects reported for the initial practice session of the 1931 season Sunday morning at the new diamond at Weed park. The candidates went through light limbering up exercises with the practice lasting a little over an hour.

Among the 21 reporting, about eight are veterans of last year's team which won 12 games out of 14 played. Coach Maynard "Snider" Fluke, backfield ace, who has been with the team the past several seasons, announced that the next practice session will be held Tuesday evening and said that several more members of last year's team will report.

BIG SERIES TO SHARE INTEREST WITH FOOTBALL

Thirteen State Games, Ten in Iowa, This Week's Menu

Friday
Simpson vs. Drake at Des Moines. Warburg vs. Plattville Miners at Plattville, Wis. Central vs. Buena Vista at Storm Lake.

Saturday

DES MOINES, Ia. — (INS) — Baseball's great attraction, the world series, this week will be forced to share interest of Iowa sports fans with a heavy schedule of state football when a score of state elvens swing into their drives Friday and Saturday.

Thirteen games, including ten contests to be played on Iowa grids, is the menu for followers of college football in the state. Among the headline offerings are a national importance trans-season game and four Iowa conference contests.

Other battles on the week's schedule will find old foes pitted against each other in traditional games.

Iowa Meets Pittsburgh
Iowa university's untied eleven will inaugurate its 1931 season with Pittsburgh university at Iowa City. Bert Ingwersen, the old gold mentor, is far from optimistic over the chances of the Hawks in their opening game with the Panthers for misfortune in the form of injuries has been a frequent visitor in the Hawkeye camp this season.

Among the more serious losses is that of Marcus Magnusson, star center, who was lost for the season last week when he broke his leg during practice.

Pittsburgh will have the added advantage of having the one "veteran" of the season already behind them when they meet Iowa. Saturday the Panthers amused themselves at the expense of Miami University, overwhelming the southerners by a score of 61 to 0.

Simpson at Drake
Drake university will open its season here Friday night at Simpson college of Indiana. The Bulldogs have shown many rough spots during practice and Solem, the coach, is worried about the team's game, especially in view of the strong showing made by the Methodists against Iowa State college last Saturday when the Cyclones narrowly eked out a 6 to 0 victory.

Grinnell, the other Missouri valley conference member in Iowa, moves into its second battle of the season against State Teachers at Cedar Falls. Both have one victory to their credit already. The Teachers downed Columbia college while the Panthers were turning back Coe college. Friday night, Iowa State college will journey to the Northwest corner of Iowa for a game with Morningside college at Sioux City. The Cyclone veterans are expected to be a strong eleven that year but must perform in a better style than that exhibited against Simpson if they are to beat Morningside for the Sioux City eleven is a powerful one.

Four Conference Games
Central and Buena Vista, Luther and Western Union, Penn and Parsons at St. Ambrose and Dubuque will offer the four Iowa conference games of the week. The games will be played at Storm Lake, Le Mars, Fairfield and Dubuque, respectively. Coe college will meet Cornell against the powerful Purdue university machine. The game will be played at La Fayette, Ind.

Cornell college meets Michigan State college at East Lansing, Mich. Michigan State celebrated the opening of the 1931 season last Saturday with a 74 to 0 victory over Alma college.

Other games on the Iowa schedule for the week finds Columbia acting as host to La Crosse teachers at Dubuque; Iowa Wesleyan entertaining Western Illinois State Teachers at Mt. Pleasant; and Warburg tackling the strong Plattville Miners on the latter's field at Plattville, Wisconsin, Friday night.

In addition to the college games scores of state high school teams will move into their third games of the season Friday and Saturday.

Reward Is Offered For Conviction of Pheasant Hunters

A reward of $25 for information leading to the arrest and conviction of pheasant hunters who shoot pheasants on which there is no open season in this vicinity, is being offered by a group of local sportsmen through A. E. Miller, deputy fish and game warden.

Pheasants may be killed in several counties in the northern part of the state, but the season is still closed here, Miller stated.

Minnesota Likened to Bridge Player With a Setting Hand

Gophers Drilling for Northwestern and Michigan Tilts

By LEO FISCHER
INS Sports Writer
MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. — About the best manner in which to rate Minnesota this fall is to compare the team with the bridge player who hasn't a good enough hand to make a bid, yet holds enough cards to possibly set anyone who does.

In other words, the Gophers aren't very likely to win a championship but they'll have a team which may arise at any time and smite down a foe. Michigan and Northwestern particularly should fear the Gophers, since the entire situation here seems to revolve around beating those two at any cost.

Michigan, especially, is the chief "hate," and the Wolverines are likely to find that Minnesota's desire to win a championship will be stronger than their ambition for a second successive title.

Crisler's Second Season
This is Coach Fritz Crisler's second season here, and according to what seems to be well-founded rumors, will be his last. Reports are that Bernie Bierman, former Minnesota coach, will take over the team next fall, with Crisler devoting all his time to the job of athletic director.

Regardless of the truth of the story, however, Fritz starts his second year with conditions in marked contrast to what they were last fall. At that time he found a flock of veteran backs—none very brilliant—and linemen, as the entire forward wall, including the great Bronko Nagurski, had graduated.

This year he is well fortified in all departments, with several fine sophomores threatening to crowd their way into regular jobs.

Still more important is the fact that the team has had a year in which to absorb the game as taught by the former Chicago star and his first assistant, Tad Weiman. Last fall it was pitiful in spots watching the Gophers trying to switch from their accustomed bone-crushing style to Crisler's more diversified attack.

Plenty of Problems
The most important problems facing the coach this fall are to find a couple of real ends, some substitute tackles, a smart quarterback and a punter. Outside of that he hasn't much to worry him.

Still, it isn't such a vast problem as it seems. With plenty of good material around the practice field, Crisler can at least try various combinations to locate these various essential items, and stands a pretty good chance of succeeding.

Although five of the returning lettermen played end last fall, chances are that two new men will be found in those positions. They are Bradbury Robinson, a reserve, and Art Fetter, who played guard and center during the past two years. Robinson is a basketball star who stands 6 feet, 1 1/2 inches, and is particularly adept on catching passes. Fetter is a big rugged chap who holds the heavyweight boxing title of the school.

Jake Ohlsen, Al Krezowski, Earl Nelson, Mervin Dillner and Harold Anderson are the veterans who are available if needed.

No Tackle Worries
There are no worries here about the regular tackles, with Pat Boland, 215 pounds, and Marshall Wells, 206, on each side of the line. The chief contenders for the under-study positions are Kenneth Gay, a 200-pounder switched over from guard; George Kakela, a brother of Wayne Kakela, star tackle three years ago.

Among the newcomers, in addition to Uhl, are George Champlin, whose 143 pounds make him even smaller than MacDougal; Johnny Hass, track captain and holder of a mark of .09.6 for the century; Lloyd Hribar, a 185-pound fullback and others.

Minnesota opens its season today with a double-header against Ripon and North Dakota Aggies. Iowa, Wisconsin, Northwestern and Michigan will be its Big Ten opponents this season. In addition, the Gophers play one of the principal intersectional contests of the fall, traveling to Palo Alto, Cal., to meet Stanford University.

FOUR NEW MARKS MADE THIS YEAR IN MAJOR LOOPS

Old Marks Broken by Webb, Grove, Reds And Athletics

BY LES CONKLIN
INS Sports Writer
NEW YORK — A few highlights, records and near-records made in the Major league pennant races that closed yesterday:

As a result of changes made in the ball, no club batted 300. Last year nine of the sixteen big league outfits hit 300 or better.

Chick Hafey's .349 percentage is the lowest made by a National league batting champion since Edd Roush's .321 took the crown in 1919.

The National league "Snail" ball cut the home run output by exactly 400. The total was 492 against 892 last year. In the American league the total was 576 against 674 last year. Year's home run total for both leagues was 1068 against 1,766 last season.

Webb Sets Record
Earl Webb, Boston Red Sox, set new record with 67 two-base hits. Previous record of 64 made by George Burns of Cleveland in 1926. Cincinnati with 195 double plays broke its own record of 194 made in 1928.

Athletics set new mark by making only 140 errors. Previous low record of 144 made by Yankees in 1923. Washington, with 143, also got under the old mark this year.

Excluding Tom Zachary's record of twelve victories and no defeats a few years ago, Lefty Grove set all-time pitching percentage record of .886 (31 wins, 4 losses). Previous record made by Joe Wood in 1911—34 wins, 5 defeats, .872 percentage. Grove also made strikeout honors for Both leagues with 171. First pitcher to win 31 games since Jim Bagby did it with Cleveland in 1919.

Gehrig Ties Ruth
Lou Gehrig of Yankees set new American League mark of 182 runs batted in, breaking league records of 175 he set in 1927. Failed to equal National League record of 190 set last year by Hack Wilson of Cubs. Also contributed new wrinkle by trying Ruth for home run crown with 46.

The Cardinals, with 101 victories, became first National League team to reach century mark since 1913 when New York Giants won 101 games.

Ben Chapman of Yankees stole 61 bases, best record since Sam Rice of Washington pilfered 63 sacks in 1920.

IOWA GETS SET FOR PITTSBURGH

Panther Eleven Will Battle Hawkeyes On Saturday

IOWA CITY, Ia. — (INS) — Worries over wester conference games were forgotten today on the University of Iowa football field as the Hawkeye gridders plunged wholeheartedly into preparations for the Pittsburgh invasion here next Saturday.

Undaunted by news of the Panthers' 61 to 0 victory over Miami, the Old Gold warriors are confident they can develop a defense which will keep Miami out of the end zone.

No, stop Reider and Heller, Pitt halfbacks. Pittsburgh's chief threat is her running attack. But that is worrying Coach Burt Ingwersen most is her aerial forays, for Iowa is painfully weak of the defense.

Gloom which gathered over the Hawkeye camp when a series of injuries rendered five varsity men inactive had largely cleared today. It was weaker, the team to some extent, it brought out one salient fact. That is that Ingwersen had good reserve material, capable of meeting the most serious emergencies.

While the Iowa fighters are making desperate preparations, docters are shaking their heads about Iowa's chances. An additional word of the world series.

With the arrival back home this morning of the Cardinals local citizens began acting in a manner which might seem a bit queer to those who don't know that Sergeant Gabby Street's boys have won their fourth National League pennant in six years.

Bayfield Wins Two More Contests on Home Field Sunday

BAYFIELD, Ia. — (Special) — Timely hitting enabled the Bayfield Bears kitchball team to win a doubleheader attraction on the local diamond Sunday afternoon. The Bears defeated the Bloomington Granger team in the first, 22 to 10 and the Pagel's Dairy Farm in the second, 21 to 0.

H. Harper and E. Theobald formed the battery for the winners in the first game while E. Welk and Bierman worked for the losers. Blaessing and E. Theobald composed the battery for Bayfield in the second game while Pagel and Swanson composed the losing battery.

Next Sunday Bayfield will play a doubleheader, meeting the New Era Wildcats in the first game and the Buttrville team from Muscatine in the second.

The Pitt-Dubuque football game scheduled for Oct. 22, 1932, has been changed to October 8. This will be the first meeting between these Pittsburgh elvens

Ernie Schaaf Now In Hospital With Septic Poisoning

BOSTON — (INS) — Ernie Schaaf Boston contender for the heavy-weight boxing championship, was a patient in St. Elizabeth's hospital today with septic poisoning in his left forearm.

Schaaf received the infection while training in Chicago for his recent bout with Tuffy Griffiths. He neglected to consult a physician until the pain became intense.

Due to his condition Schaaf's matches with Napoleon Jack Dorval at the Boston Garden on Oct. 6 and with Tuffy Griffiths in Chicago on Oct. 30, will be postponed.

ALL MISSOURI VALLEY TEAMS TO PLAY SOON

None of Them to Play Each Other in Loop Games, However

DES MOINES, Ia. — (INS) — Every member of the Missouri Valley conference moves into action this week-end on the gridiron but none of them will meet each other in conference games.

Four elvens, Grinnell, Creighton, Washington and Oklahoma A. & M. already have one victory behind them. Each won their initial contest of the season last week.

Drake, the 1930 champion, was busily swinging through a long practice session Saturday with still six more days to go before their season of 11 game begins.

Friday night the Drake eleven will meet the Simpson college team on the Bulldog victory and should win easily.

Oklahoma vs. Minnesota
Saturday Oklahoma will tackle the toughest job of those listed for the valley teams this week. The southerners will meet the powerful Minnesota university team.

Last Saturday the Oklahoma team, conceded to be one of the best in the history of the school and one of the strongest in the conference began its 1931 season with a twin victory. In the first game the veteran Oklahomaans ran over Bethany college of Linsborg, Kansas, for a 34 to 0 victory. In the second contest they added another victory, defeating Northwestern Teachers of Talequah, Okla., 25 to 0.

Eight backs were used in the two games by the Aggie mentor. Three outstanding performances were turned in by Clark, Walker, Barham and Clarence Highfill, all veterans of the Oklahoma eleven.

Wyoming At Creighton
Creighton Saturday will act as host at Omaha to Wyoming university. As on last Saturday, the Bluejays will be invading strongly on the bunch of Sophomores who defeated Baker 26 to 7 last week with four touchdowns scored in the first half.

Grinnell will meet an interstate foe, Iowa State Teachers college, at Cedar Falls this week. Both teams opened their seasons last week-end with victories, the Pioneers downed coe college 26 to 0 on Friday night.

Forty was not without some cost to the Grinnell eleven as Al Rose, fullback and Otto Golz, an end, will be out of the lineup for several weeks from injuries they received during the game. Ulrich and Thomas backs, gave promise of great things to come in the Grinnell game last week. Both shared kicking, running and tackling honors.

BALLITIS HITS ST. LOUIS FANS

Card Local Citizens Are Acting Just a Trifle Queer

ST. LOUIS — (INS) — St. Louis today was stricken with a serious case of baseballitis. The patient is not expected to recover until the close of the world series.

With the arrival back home this morning of the Cardinals local citizens began acting in a manner which might seem a bit queer to those who don't know that Sergeant Gabby Street's boys have won their fourth National League pennant in six years.

The celebrating began informally when the Cardinals were named today by President John A. Heydler of the National league and President Will Harridge of the American league. Heydler's selections were Willie Killebrew, Jim Brown, Stark, while Harridge named R. F. Nallin and W. F. McGowan.

CARDINAL HITTER WINS SWAT TITLE OVER BILL TERRY

Darkness Alone Gives Red Bird Batting Leadership

By COPELAND C. BURG
INS Sports Writer
NEW YORK — Chick Hafey of the St. Louis Cardinals today climbed a tottering throne to become National league batting king.

In fact everything was so wobbly Chick may be known as champion in name only, or nightbird Hafey, the prince of darkness.

As the New York Giants and Brooklyn Robins battled in the second game of a double header yesterday, the final game of the year, darkness descended like a subway express and the game was called in the fourth inning, the Giants leading 6 to 1. Had the game gone five innings the hit made by Bill Terry would have counted and he would have won the hit title. But it did not count apparently and Hafey won the honors from the Giant socker with an average of .349.

Darkness Hails Game
Darkness descended like a subway express and the game was called in the fourth inning, the Giants leading 6 to 1. Had the game gone five innings the hit made by Bill Terry would have counted and he would have won the hit title. But it did not count apparently and Hafey won the honors from the Giant socker with an average of .349.

Terry's average, minus his uncounted hit, was figured at .340.6. The figures have not been officially approved but it appeared Mr. Terry would have to be sorry and wish he had made his ill-timed hit in the first game of the day, which the Robins grabbed 12 to 3.

Lou Gehrig poked his homer No. 46 as the Yankees crushed the champion Athletics, 13 to 1 and tied Babe Ruth seasonal home run honors.

Cardinals Win Pair
Derringer and Johnson pitched the Cardinals to a 6 to 2 and 5 to 3 successes over the Cincy Reds. Hafey going hitless in their first encounter but making one safety in the finale.

Home runs by Vince Barton and Danny Taylor won 3 to 1 and 8 to 4 for the Cubs of Chicago over Pittsburgh.

The Phillies won undisputed sixth place honors when they beat Boston 5 to 3. Boston took the final tilt, 12 to 2.

Russell hurried the Red Sox of Boston to a 4 to 2 win over Detroit, while the St. Louis Browns downed Chicago's Sox twice, 10 to 8 and 2 to 1 to pass Boston and finish in fifth place.

If the standards of the modern woman are to become anything like the standards of the French empress whose funny little feathered and bird-trimmed bonnets are in such good style now, reformers will be unusually busy this coming season,

They made a very dignified and staid appearance. . . . A photograph taken in 1860, showing Napoleon III and Eugenie dressed in the fashions of the time.

"Eugenie galloped through the streets of Madrid on her horse, smoking cigarettes and cigars and followed by the young bloods . . . which could hardly be called an old-fashioned touch."

Surprising Moral Significance of the New Queen Eugenie Hats

By HELEN WELSHIMER

ALL of the moralists are stressing the fact that the new fashions are heralding the return of the old-fashioned woman.

Now it's the style to wear the kind of a hat that Empress Eugenie did—a perky little bonnet with a small brim, shallow crown, audacious eye-dip, and an ostrich feather, known in fashion circles as the "Queen Eugenie" hat.

The hat may bring back a sweet and virtuous charm, the moralists believe, but Eugenie and the Parisian ladies certainly didn't find that it worked that way. If their influence is getting to work in the new fashions there is a very interesting winter ahead.

Dressing the way the last French empress dressed is one thing—but acting the way she acted is something else again. And if American women are going to copy anything out of Eugenie's book besides her hats the reformers will have to gird themselves for action in a big way.

Empress Eugenie, who was the 19th century fashion queen, as well as the wife of Napoleon III, didn't know exactly who her father was, according to a good many historians. However, her mother, a Spanish girl, had married the Count de Montijo, so Eugenie took his name.

Tongues wagged in the salons of Madrid, though, and Eugenie was off to a gay start long before the amorous young emperor spied her. Her mother helped her along.

The Countess of Montijo was very frivolous and very merry. She wanted everyone around her to dance and sing. She entertained a large number of actors and actresses at her country home so she could put on theatricals.

Her two daughters, Francisca and Eugenie, were fashioned after her own heart. They liked love and suitors, too.

BUT just at first Eugenie thought that if she couldn't have the one she wanted, she wouldn't play the game with anyone else.

The Duke of Alba was the man she wanted. However, he was just as nice to her 16-year-old sister as he was to 15-year-old Eugenie.

One day the mother of the two girls told the gallant Spanish grandee that it was high time he decided which one of her daughters he wanted. Eugenie, passionately in love, hid behind the door to wait for Alba's answer.

He asked for Francisca.

The tempestuous maiden with the flame-red hair immediately took poison. She didn't die,

"The hat may bring back a sweet and virtuous charm . . . but Eugenie and the Parisian ladies certainly didn't find it worked that way."

although she was ill for a long time. And she didn't forget the Duke of Alba, either. To keep from remembering she threw herself into every pleasure that came along.

Eugenie galloped through the streets of Madrid, on her horse, smoking cigarettes and cigars and followed by the young bloods of the city—which could hardly be called an old-fashioned touch.

She went to the bull fights, flirted with the toreadors, and presented them with red caps embroidered in gold.

She carried a sharp-pointed dagger in her belt, which is a little more advanced than anything the present offers.

All in all, she turned into such a bewitching beauty that every wild young man of Madrid, and some that weren't so wild, fell in love with her.

Eventually Queen Isabella of Spain appointed charming Eugenie as one of her maids-of-honor. The queen learned that her new attendant was very fond of moonlight strolls. Every night she went walking—not alone, but with a certain young page. Isabella, though not strait-laced in any way, dismissed Eugenie.

Eugenie was growing a little tired of her adventures. She decided to enter a convent. An aged nun decided that Eugenie wasn't the type. She told her that she was born to grace a throne, not a cloister, so the future Empress of France, who was destined to have a hat named for her, went back to the world to find a husband with a crown.

NOBODY knows when Louis Napoleon met Eugenie. Some say that it was in 1847-48, just after she and her mother had left the court and Madrid.

Napoleon had been a harum-scarum sort of youth who used to ride down the streets, shooting, jumping fences, smiling at pretty girls. He was rather small and not very talkative.

Mlle. de Montijo, as Eugenie was known before her marriage, wanted to marry Napoleon and be the empress. But she was clever enough to keep the knowledge from him. Everywhere she went men flocked to receive a dazzling smile. The group included Napoleon.

For two years or longer Eugenie kept him fascinated. She was very careful to let him know that he couldn't have her unless he married her. Napoleon, very much in love, forgot all about wanting a princess of royal blood, and proposed.

So she married Napoleon on January 30, 1853. The church bells of the capital all pealed forth, and 101 guns thundered a salute as she went to Notre Dame for the ceremony.

Pretty soon everyone was talking about the manner in which the beautiful young empress was trying to imitate Marie Antoinette, especially the faults and foibles of the unfortunate queen.

GRAND parties were the vogue at the palace. Eugenie's toilettes were the rage of Paris. Her equipage, when she went riding, was magnificent. She was as extravagant as she pleased, and Napoleon highly approved of her every act.

However, she discovered that her husband, although he really loved her, was a very fickle man. He went from one amour to another. He had a whole succession of mistresses.

Somebody told Napoleon, one day, that he wasn't playing fair with his Eugenie.

"I was faithful to her during the first six months of our union," he answered, "but I need little distractions . . . and I always return to her with pleasure."

If the wife of Napoleon III had been the type of woman that the moralists think wore the ostrich-plumed hats she would have been shocked.

Not Eugenie! She didn't like it, but she was game. She started to pick out beautiful women to amuse her husband.

Eugenie herself had a great number of ardent admirers. But it is said she didn't have any lovers. What was all right for Napoleon wouldn't have been for her, and she was wise enough to know it.

The empress who set the styles in fashions had a wayward streak that liked adventure. One time, while at Fontainebleau, she decided to go to a rustic dance in the village. She told one of her ladies-in-waiting about it, and the woman got two peasant costumes. That night they drove to a hut in the woods, changed their clothes, and entered the dance tent to mingle with the dancing peasants.

Some of the peasants tried to make them dance.

The shining, lovely empress wouldn't. When she had been a girl in Madrid, she remembered. . . . But she was an empress now!

Just about the time that one of the workmen put his arm around Eugenie and another kissed her lady-in-waiting, the husband of the lady-in-waiting arrived. His wife confided in him.

THE court shook its head. It was agreed that the Empress Eugenie was over-riding entirely too many conventions.

Meantime Eugenie was fascinated by clothes. The craving for pleasure was excessive. The gayer and more daring court life became, the more luxurious the costumes were.

People from other courts talked about the freedom in manners and conversation at the court where Louis Napoleon and Eugenie were the reigning monarchs.

Eugenie had been fond of designing startling costumes when she was a girl. As soon as she got on the throne she decided to be the queen of fashion, too.

She got to work on the hats.

First, she set the neck free by doing away with the stiff type of headgear that hung down on the neck and shoulders so inconveniently. Awkward hats disappeared. In their place, she originated a hood which served as a setting for the face—the Queen Eugenie hat.

Twice a year Eugenie looked over her complete wardrobe. She started the changeability of style that sways the fashion world today. It was said that she never wore the same costume twice.

A whole row of feminine foibles followed the wearing of the Queen Eugenie hat.

Eugenie herself had shining red hair. Others wanted it. Thus hair dyes came in.

Eugenie had plenty of hair for curls which she draped at her neck. Less fortunate women had to buy theirs. False hair resulted. Eugenie curls sold by the thousands.

Eugenie pencilled her eyebrows black, so other women did the same. The custom was old in Spain. Eugenie's own bright eyes didn't need a stimulant, but the women who wanted the same kind of light in theirs got to using belladonna.

THE quiet charm that somehow or other has attached itself to old-fashioned clothes is a myth. Empress Eugenie, for all her brilliance, sartorially speaking, was more alert politically than the so-called modernists. She knew every political move. When Napoleon's health gave way in 1865, she got him to entrust her with the French government and was even made regent.

Eugenie, waving a political sceptre in one hand and a fashion sceptre in the other, destroyed the empire and nearly ruined France.

Eugenie's downfall came after her husband was defeated by the Germans in the Franco-Prussian war, and he was captured at Sedan. The Empress Eugenie fled to England, the brilliant court disappeared, and France was torn by mob scenes as the Red Revolutionists destroyed the second empire and set up the Commune.

So the wearing of Eugenie's hat . . . the demure little bonnet with an audacious eye-dip and ostrich plume . . . may be a signal that the Bolsheviks are coming to America.

For say what you please of its old-fashioned charm, Eugenie's hat stirred up a world of trouble for Europe.

Toxin-Antitoxin Dangerous And Useless to the Users

Toxin-Antitoxin does not make one immune to diphtheria. This assertion has been proved in this series of articles by statements from the leading medical men of this country, even those who formerly were using this method of treatment. Its dangers are well-known and of late an increasing number of warnings have been issued by leading orthodox medical journals such as the following article published in the Journal of the American Medical Association under the title "Therapeutic Serums and Allergic Dangers," Vol. 96, No. 23, p. 1965:

"Every one who deals extensively with immune persons is attended with certain menaces. These involve manifestations of hypersensitivity in man. Such a condition may arise in persons in whom a definite previous sensitization has been effected and likewise in those for whom no such sensitization is known or can be conclusively proved. Anaphylactic shock occasionally occurs. So-called serum disease is a more widely known phenomenon. It follows not infrequently on subcutaneous, intravenous or intrathecal injections of animal serums employed for purposes of making a patient immune and these symptoms may some times be delayed.

"The most common symptom is a skin eruption. . . . The possibility of these occurrences may indicate why the use of therapeutic serums awakens hesitancy in a physician faced with the possibility of discomfort, harm and even death in a patient despite all care to avert any untoward effects."

Not only is the rank failure of toxin-antitoxin well known in an article in California and Western Medicine, Vol. XXXIII, No. 5, but it is stated that in many children it actually makes them EVEN MORE SUSCEPTIBLE to the disease against which it was previously supposed to make them immune. Also the fact, long known to many medical men, is now published:—namely, that the serum deteriorates when kept under certain condition or exposed to light.

These published articles in which the failure of toxin-antitoxin is admitted by these orthodox medical journals who have previously advocated this method of preventive treatment are most significant, and show the changing attitude toward this fallacious method of so-called preventive treatment.

In spite of these known dangers, however, the administration of this serum on a wholesale scale is attempted regardless of the dangers incident to such inoculations. These campaigns are backed by large advertisements of the biological manufacturers in which parents are urged to "protect" their children by this "safe," "harmless" and "sure" method.

One such recent advertisement by a vaccine and serum manufacturer is most significant and reveals the fallacy of their previous assertions. Now a goat serum is recommended. It is stated in this advertisement that the physician can "inject it with the comfort of the disease the prior use of TAT will not have an untoward effect or make the patient sensitized." This naturally is an absolutely admission that the old Toxin-Antitoxin which was recommended as safe and harmless etc. has been found unsatisfactory and even dangerous, and it is just as reasonable to suppose that something will also be discovered to be radically wrong with this new goat serum. No doubt it will later be discarded for some other nostrum. But how about the thousands of little children who will be inoculated in the meantime and who will suffer disastrous consequences because of the greed of organized medicine in exploiting the public? As a taxpayer do you not feel our public schools were founded primarily for education, not medication and experimentation on the pupils? And do you not feel also that all public funds allotted for education should be used for that purpose, and that only, and that the routine of our schools should not be broken to promote the sale of any commodity, let alone one put out by a group of men who brazenly brag of the commercial profit they can derive from such sales? If the schools should be polluted by medical exploitation, do you not feel you should have a choice of the methods used whether it should be Osteopathy, Chiropractic, Naturopathy, Christian Science, or any other system of healing you might want and not have any particular system forced upon you such as Allopathy? Parents have the intelligence to choose their own method of doctoring.

Medicine is not an exact science but is based on guessing and experimentation. Guesses about inoculation should not be taken too seriously. The health of the school children is a serious matter and vital to the welfare of the nation. The blood stream should not be allowed to be polluted by injected medicine as is being carried out at present so energetically in our communities.

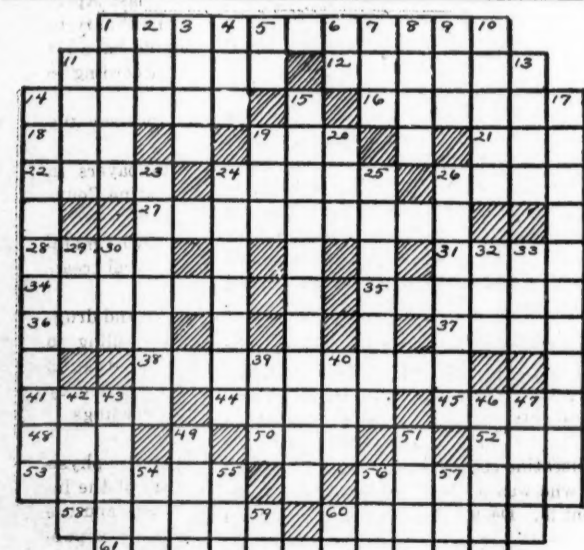

Besides, the campaign for vaccination and toxin-antitoxin will be followed by something else if permitted. It is just the entering wedge as is admitted according to the plan of campaign outlined by Drs. L. O. Greb and Hertha F. Vaughan in the Journal of the M. A. of August 8, 1931, p. 366, which was quoted at length in yesterday's article. The following additional quotation below concerns this phase of the matter only.—It states: "We feel that the campaign to reduce the incidence of diphtheria is but an entering wedge into a program which will involve a periodic health examination, prenatal service for the expectant mother, and hygienic instruction for infants and children, as well as campaigns to control tuberculosis, cancer and other preventable diseases. The interest of the medical profession has been activated."

This quotation as well as other appearing recently show that the plans of organized medicine are to eventually force Allopathic medicine upon the entire public regardless of its fallacies and failures and the dangers. Individual liberty is ignored as is the preference of the individual.

SPENT 71 CENTS TO SAVE 1
LOS ANGELES, Cal. (INS)—After spending 71 cents to register a protest against a special tax levied upon her property, Mrs. Clara Pringle hastily withdrew her objection when informed the assessment amounted to one cent. Mrs. Pringle said she had spent 12 cents writing letters, 2 cents for stationery, 15 cents for telephone calls, 35 cents to park her car and seven cents for gasoline and oil. Her time, she said, was worth $2 but that she would let it go.

WEST LIBERTY

WEST LIBERTY, Ia.—(Special)—The funeral of Rev. J. H. Mahaffy was held from the Presbyterian church Tuesday afternoon and was largely attended. Flowers mute tokens of sympathy were in abundance. Rev. E. W. F. Hollas of Brooklyn, Ia., a close friend of the deceased and the who installed Rev. Mahaffy into the church service one year ago at this place preached the sermon, assisted by Rev. Randall of Muscatine, Rev. Lumbard of Wilton and a minister from Columbus Junction.

A male quartet from the Welch Congregational church of Iowa City, I. N. Rolland, E. Hughes, J. W. Howel and Thomas Davis, sang Jesus Lover of My Soul and Lead Kindly Light and a mixed quartet from Liberty, Mrs. L. A. Whitacre, Miss Effie Mae Turner, Archie Dittmer and Roy Tharp sang Higher Ground and Still, Still With Thee. The acting pall bearers were Messrs Jayne, Smart, Reed, Lewis, Eichenour and Creese all brother Masons with the entire Mason lodge attending in a body. Rev. Mahaffy was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Mahaffy and was born in New York May 7, 1872, receiving his education at Monmouth college Illinois, then later graduated from the State University of Iowa.

Surviving are the widow and two children, Leslie Mahaffy and family of Iowa City and Arline a teacher in the Brooklyn schools, one sister Miss Susan Mahaffy of Tecumseh, Neb., and one brother, Rev. J. Mahaffy of Ann Arbor, Mich., who were all present at the services. The funeral was in Oak Ridge, West Liberty.

West Liberty has made a record for itself this year in the production of tomatoes. For more than three hundred tons were taken care of at the plant last week. The tomatoes were brought into the canning plant so rapidly that the peelers worked several hours in the evenings in order to care for the quantities and on Friday an S. O. S. call went out for local citizens to help. More than forty men and women worked at the plant that evening and turned their earnings into the treasury of the local Red Cross.

The following report is of the weeks work: 632,028 pounds, with 606 hours help. The peelers are paid 7 cents a pall, with a bonus of a cent and a half to each peeler who stays through the season without being absent from any working hours.

The limit to each of the contractors is fifteen baskets per acre. Rev. and Mrs. Frank Sutton and Miss Eva Pingrey are attending a district meeting of the First Christian churches held in Keota several days this week.

Irwin Compton is ill at his home on north Calhoun street.

Mr. and Mrs. Bert Phillips left for their home in Truro, Ia. Wednesday after a visit of several weeks with their nephews and sisters and Roy Evans and sisters, Mesdames

The weekly meeting of the Rotary club with Dr. J. C. Carey, president presiding was held Tuesday evening in the Masonic dining room. The wives were guests of the evening. Other guests were: Dr. Stindman and wife, and Harold Stevens, president of Iowa City Rotary club and wife, Mrs. Harold T. Carrick of Santa Monica, Cal., Miss Helen McGowan of Pasadena, Cal., Mrs. Margaret Jack, Rev. and Mrs. W. A. Smith and Maurice Anderson of West Liberty. Before dinner was served by the ladies of the Christian church several songs were sung by the entire group. A. H. Dittmar, song leader and Frank Smart at the piano. Invocation was given by Rev. Frank Sutton, pastor of the local Christian church. President Carey gave President Stevens the honor introducing the speaker of the evening, who because of his great work not only at the Children's hospital in Iowa City, but because of his great renown as one of the best known orthopedic surgeons in the United States really needed only his name, Dr. Stindman, to be mentioned to the seventy-five to be introduced.

Dr. Stindman gave a report of the Inter-National Rotary convention which was held in Vienna recently and to which he was one of the U. S. delegates. The report was most interesting, instructive and educational. In behalf of the club President Carey graciously thanked Dr. Stindman for his talk and for the time spent in coming to the Rotary.

The new hall in Hampstead, England, built to hold the relics of John Keats, the poet, has just been formally opened, and is attracting many visitors. It is adjacent to Wentworth Place at the invitation of Charles Brown, the occupier, with whom he also went on a tour in Scotland, to be tortured, he wrote his brother, by sadities and the bagpipes. Among the exhibits is the letter he wrote to Fanny Brawne, to whom he was so devotedly attached, after the symptoms of illness that made their marriage improbable "Do not live," he pleaded, "as if I was not existing. Do not forget me."

Muscatine Loyalty League

The True Spirit Of Progress

THE SPIRIT OF LOYALTY

Loyalty—according to Webster—is faithfulness to a friend.

We all want to be friends. In Muscatine, which is one of the most progressive cities in Iowa, we cherish friendliness and goodwill one toward another, whether it be in business or in our social contacts.

The merchants and business men, whose names appear on this page, are exemplars of friendly service and are advocates of that characteristic most essential for the best interests of a community—loyalty. If the community is to advance, if the public institutions are to succeed, the spirit of loyalty is most important. Merchants, professional men, religious bodies, churches must co-operate with this view in mind; there should be a predominant spirit of all for one and one for all.

What we have today in Muscatine has come only after days of slaving by our ancestors when Muscatine was a mere hamlet. They laid the foundation of a great city in a great state that has never been shaken by the adversities of time.

It would seem then that we, whose road to a life of less hardships has been assured, should appreciate the fact and take advantage of the fortunate circumstances with which we have been endowed. We should endeavor to hold the fort that was erected by our predecessors, never forgetting that we too will some day be measured by our success in which we have carried on the work of those who have gone before.

If we neglect our duties and allow Muscatine to lag rather than go forward, we are lacking of the spirit of loyalty that should imbue each deed, each action in the interest of the community in which we make our livelihood. Let's be loyal to Muscatine. Let's pull together and help Muscatine grow.
